THIRD INCREASE IN TWO WEEKS

In the Discount Rate of Bank of England.

RATE GOES TO FIVE PER CENT

British Bankers Wish To Retain Their Gold.

Leading Financiers Declare That Tighter Money Will Prevail in the United States for the Next Two Months as a Result, but That There Is Absolutely No Danger of a Financial Panic.

London, Oct. 21.—The Bank of England announced today that the discount rate has been increased from four to five per cent. This is the third increase since October 7, with the result that the rate charged at that date has been doubled in exactly a single fortnight. The banks of Germany and Belgium have also increased their rates and it is intimated that there is a distinct understanding among the foreign bankers whereby the rate shall be kept up in order to check the waive of speculation which is sweeping all over the world. Demands for money for speculative purposes alarmed the bankers and it was decided to raise the rates for money in order to keep control of the situation and prevent undue inflation of values.

Surprise Is Caused.

New York, Oct. 21.—The announcement that the Bank of England would increase its rate of discount was forecasted by the United Press yesterday. The fact, however, that the rate was increased a full point, instead of one-half point, came as a great surprise to the operators on the "street," and it is generally admitted that the real reason is the desire of the British banking authorities to retain gold in England. There has been a feeling for some time among the leading financial interests here that speculation was running wild and that values were being unduly inflated. The general public has not been in the market as strongly as before the last financial panic, but speculation has been to a great extent professional in character. Values, however, have increased to a phenomenal extent until they are today considered to be at the top notch figures. There is a strong bear element forming and it has been plain for the last ten days that the list is to be subjected to real pressure.

Tighter Rates Here.

Because of this local banking institutions have warned clients against extensive borrowing operations and have compelled clients whose views were too optimistic to restrict their speculation. The Bank of England increase will be followed by tighter rates here, although there is admittedly no shortage of money.

The banks, however, point out that at this time much cash is needed for the movement of crops. While many of the central and western banks are in a position to furnish this money without aid, others are calling in their loans which have been made in the East and naturally this decreases the cash reserve.

Leading financiers declare tight money will prevail for the next two months. They declare that business conditions are at present very healthy and that they intend to keep them so. There is absolutely no danger of a financial panic, they declare, and the industrial situation is getting brighter every day. Because of this, it is intimated, the financial interests will insist on speculation being kept within the limit and all recklessness prohibited.

MURDERER RIZZO IS FOUND GUILTY

Of the Deaths of Two Italian Children at Utica.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The jury in the Rizzo case returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree at 3:10 this afternoon.

Rizzo was indicted for the brutal murder of Theresa Procopio and Freddie Infusino and the shooting of Fannie Infusino, September 12, after an attempt to outrage the little girls.

The chief witness against him was little Fannie, who survived her wound and whose story could not be shaken.

MAJOR GENERAL OTIS IS DEAD

Passes Away at Gates, New York, This Morning.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Major General Elwell Stephen Otis, United States army, retired, died at his home in Gates, near Rochester, early today of heart trouble. With him at the last were his wife, daughters, brother and the latter's wife.

General Otis was born at Frederick, Maryland, March 25, 1838. He saw much service against the Indians. He was judge advocate of the court which condemned Captain Oberlin M. Carter for the Savannah feuds. He succeeded General Merritt in the Philippines in 1898 and his aggressive policy won the commendation of President McKinley. He left the islands in 1900 and from that time until his retirement in 1902, was in command of the department of the lakes. General Otis leaves three daughters.

WIFE CHARGED WITH MURDER

Accused of Killing Husband as He Sleeps at Her Side.

Athens, O., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Dora Harper was arrested late last night charged with murdering her husband, Frank, a well-known railroad telegraph lineman. Harper was killed Tuesday night while in bed with his wife. She says he committed suicide. The coroner's investigation resulted in charging her with murder in the first degree.

JUDGE LOVETT CHOSEN TODAY

To Succeed the Late Edward H. Harriman,

AS PRESIDENT OF THE UNION PACIFIC

Three New Vice Presidents Added to the Staff.

The Election of Lovett and the Placing of Julius Kruttschnitt on the Executive Committee Bears Out the View That Harriman's Roads Would Be Controlled by His Old Lieutenants.

New York, Oct. 21.—The directors of the Union Pacific Railway company today elected Judge Robert S. Lovett president of that corporation to succeed the late E. H. Harriman. The other retiring officers were re-elected.

Ex-Judge Lovett was also elected president of the Oregon Short Line Railroad company today. Three new vice presidents were added to the official staff of the Union Pacific. These are J. C. Stubbs, traffic manager of the Harriman lines; Julius Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation, and William Mahl, controller of the Union Pacific.

A. L. Mohler, with headquarters at Omaha, was re-elected a vice president. The other three vice presidents occupied newly created positions.

A similar change was made in the Oregon Short Line company. Messrs. Stubbs, Kruttschnitt and Mahl were also elected vice presidents of that company. W. H. Bancroft, vice president, with headquarters at Salt Lake City, was re-elected.

Jacob H. Schiff and William Rockefeller were added to the executive committee of the Oregon Short Line. Otherwise, the executive committee of the Oregon Short Line and the Union Pacific remain unchanged.

The election of Judge Lovett and the placing of Julius Kruttschnitt on the executive committee of the two roads have borne out, Wall street believes, the general belief that E. H. Harriman's roads would be controlled after his death by his lieutenants, Lovett and Kruttschnitt, who were known to be close to their chief and in harmony with his policies.

The Annual Report.

The annual report showed for the year ending June 30, a balance available for dividends of $37,616,676, or nineteen per cent. of the common stock. The company had a balance of profit and loss of $83,007,788, a gain of $19,029,209 over last year.

Current assets were $70,631,047, a decrease of $2,153,568, but current liabilities were only $22,089,571, a decrease of $10,689,183, showing that the excess of current assets over current liabilities was $48,545,356, an increase of $37,235,964.

TRIPLE MURDER AT KANSAS CITY

Robbery Is Held To Have Been the Motive.

THREE VICTIMS SHOT TO DEATH

Young Woman, Married Sister and Her Husband.

When Miss Rose McMahan Fails To Return from a Visit with Her Married Sister, Four Miles from Kansas City, Search Is Made for Her by Her Brother and Bodies of the Three Victims Found.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 21.—Bloodhounds today are leading a posse through Wyandotte county, Kansas, in search for the person who murdered Alonzo Van Royen, his wife, Margaret, and Mrs. Van Royen's sister, Rose McMahan, whose bodies were found at the Van Royen home on the Reldy road, five miles west of Kansas City, Kansas.

The triple murder is baffling the police. At first their theory was that Van Royen had killed his wife and sister-in-law, and fled and it was not until a hunt of ten hours disclosed his body that the police concluded that the murders were committed by some other person.

The bodies of the women were discovered by their brother, James McMahan. He went to their home and found the bodies lying on the floor of a room. The authorities were notified and a search for Van Royen began. His body was found near a ravine about fifty feet from the house.

Mrs. Van Royen's body had been pierced by six bullets which the authorities say were fired from a thirty-eight caliber revolver. Three bullets were found in the body of her sister.

News of the murder brought a number of farmers to the scene. With lanterns they searched last night for Van Royen. The body was buried under leaves and was found after midnight this morning. There were two bullet wounds in the body, both in the back. One bullet passed through the heart.

There were three wounds on Van Royen's face. There is said to have been a visitor at the Van Royen home Tuesday, and it is for him that the officials are searching. James McMahan says he saw the visitor, a man whom he did not know, talking to Van Royen. He thought the man was buying potatoes.

A diamond ring which Mrs Van Royen wore was not on her finger when the body was found. Jewelry and money said to have amounted to $700 are missing.

WILL INVADE THE UGANDA COUNTRY

Colonel Roosevelt Makes Preparations to That End.

Nairobi, B. E. A., Oct 21.—Colonel Roosevelt returned to Nairobi today to begin preparations for his trip to the Uganda country.

Kermit Roosevelt has sent word from Nakuru that he will rejoin his father either tonight or tomorrow. Kermit is heading a hunting expedition of his own in Nakuru, and is having good luck.

Colonel Roosevelt had an unexpected pleasure last evening, when he was visited by Sir Percy Gironard, the new governor of British East Africa. Mr. Gironard but recently arrived in Africa, and he was on his way to Uganda when the United Press correspondent informed him of the presence of Colonel Roosevelt at Naivasha.

The governor halted his train and went immediately to Mr. Roosevelt's headquarters. The two men spent more than an hour together, most of the time being given to discussing the arrangements for the colonel's Uganda hunting trip. Mr. Roosevelt apparently knew much more about East African conditions than the new governor and he proceeded to dilate to the official upon the wonderful resources of the country and the immense possibilities for good in the wise administration of the dependency. At 5 o'clock Sir Percy continued his journey. While Sir Percy has spent much of his life in Canada, where he was born, he had never before met Mr. Roosevelt.

Nine men out of ten overestimate their importance in the world.

THOUSANDS DIE IN THE TORNADO

Which Sweeps Over Valley of the Ganges,

CARRYING DEATH AND DESTRUCTION

Every River in the Storm Zone Is Covered with the Bodies of the Victims of the Elements—Refugees Say the Dead Will Reach to Between 5,000 and 10,000. Real Total Will Never Be Known.

Calcutta, Oct. 21.—Their story corroborated by the mute evidence of scores of twisted bodies floating down the broad Ganges to the sea, refugees from the storm-swept territory in East Bengal arriving today tell tales of a terrible disaster. Only a few worn-out and exhausted natives have succeeded in reaching Calcutta. From their accounts it is estimated that between 5,000 and 10,000 perished in the tornado.

The refugees describe the stricken territory as littered for miles with heaps of debris that were once light native houses. Scattered among the ruins and over the storm-swept fields are scores of dead natives left where they died by the fleeing survivors. Every river in the storm zone is covered in many places and floating bodies swept into the stream by the floods resulting from the rains accompanying the storm. Even the approximate number of dead will never be known. The Anglo-Indian press is manifesting its usual want of interest in the catastrophe for the reason that few Europeans were known to be in the stricken district.

FOURTEEN DOGS ARE SACRIFICED

To Appease Hunger of Cook and Companions

ON WAY BACK FROM THE POLE

Thus Add 700 Pounds of Meat to Supplies.

Cook Thus Answers Criticism of George Kennan in the Outlook to the Effect That Cook's Supplies Were Too Few for His Trip. Professor Dyche Offers To Scale Mount McKinley for Dr. Cook.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 21.—Tentative arrangements will be begun today between Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, and Professor L. Dyche, of Kansas university, who, through Chancellor Strong of that institution, yesterday, offered to scale Mount McKinley and recover Cook's records. Cook lectured at Michigan university last night and was informed of Professor Dyche's offer. Cook had not received Chancellor Strong's telegram but said:

"I shall accept, without a moment's hesitation, if the offer is made officially. I am delighted, and certainly esteem this a high compliment from Chancellor Strong."

Professor Dyche has been on polar expeditions with both Dr. Cook and Commander Peary.

A new phase of Cook's polar journey came out when he was asked to answer George Kennan's article in the October Outlook, questioning Cook's ability to make the journey from March 21 to May 2, with the supplies he had. Cook explained that he and his two Eskimos killed and ate fourteen of their sixteen dogs, adding 700 pounds of meat. "I shall answer him over my own signature soon," he said.

YAQUIS SOLD LIKE CATTLE

Only Difference Is They Do Not Bring So Much.

SIXTY-FIVE DOLLARS IS AVERAGE PRICE

The Money Goes to the Grafting Army Officers.

One Colonel Alone Exports 15,700 to Yucatan—There They Are Held as Slaves—The Women Are Forced To Marry Chinamen, To Make Chinamen More Contented and Hold Them on Jobs.

New York, Oct. 21.—An entirely different light is thrown on the Yaqui Indians of Mexico, generally supposed to be marauders and murderers, by John Kenneth Turner, whose second article on "Barbarous Mexico" will appear tomorrow in the American magazine for November. Turner quotes many authorities to show that the Yaqui were originally the best workers in Mexico and that they would have been a sturdy, thrifty people had not Mexican officials plotted to dispossess them of their rich lands.

"The origin of the Yaqui troubles," Turner says, "is generally attributed to a plot on the part of a number of politicians, the purpose being to get possession of the rich lands in southern Sonora which the Yaquis had held for hundreds of years. For twenty-four years past the only governors Sonora has had have been Ramon Corral, now Diaz's vice president; Rafael Yzabal and Luis Torres. These three have rotated in office, as it were, for more than a generation. As no popular elections were held at all, these three friends had absolutely no one to answer to except President Diaz and their authority in Sonora has been absolute."

So a war was begun against the Yaquis, Turner says, quoting as authority the words of Teresa Urrea Cabora, a highly-educated Mexican woman and historian. A pair of officials were at the bottom of the war.

Opportunity for Graft.

"They saw an opportunity for graft in bringing a large body of soldiers into the state. So they harassed the Yaquis. They sent bogus surveyors through the Yaqui valley to mark out the land and tell the people that the government had decided to give it to foreigners. They illegally confiscated $80,000 in a bank belonging to Chief Cajeme. Finally they sent armed men to arrest Cajeme, and when they could not find him they set fire to his house and to those of his neighbors and assaulted the women of the village, even Cajeme's wife not being respected. Finally the victims were goaded into war.

"Since that day, twenty-four years ago, the Mexican government has maintained an army almost perpetually in the field against the Yaquis, an army ranging from 2,100 to 6,000. Thousands of soldiers and tens of thousands of Yaquis have been killed in battle. Finally, in 1891, the ground was literally taken from under the feet of the rebels. By act of federal government their lands were taken from them, and handed over to one man, General Lorenzo Torres, who is now chief of the army in Sonora.

"The deportation of Yaquis to Yucatan began about four years ago.

Revealed to Colonel.

"The secret which lies at the roots of the whole Yaqui affair was revealed to me by a colonel in the Mexican army. For the past four years this officer had been one of those in immediate charge of transporting all the Yaqui exiles to Yucatan. 'The last three and one-half years,' he told me, 'I have delivered just 15,700 Yaquis in Yucatan. These Yaquis sell in Yucatan for $65 apiece—men, women and children. Who gets the money? Well, $10 goes for my services. The rest is turned over to the secretary of war. This, however, is only a drop in the bucket for every foot of land, every building, everything left behind by the Yaquis is appropriated for his private use by the official in charge of the locality from which they have been removed.

"So, according to this man, who has himself made at least $157,000 out of the business, the Yaquis are being deported for the money there is in it. In Yucatan I soon learned what became of the Yaquis exiles. They are sent to the Henequin plantation as slaves. They are held as chattles, they are bought and sold. They receive no wages. They are beaten, sometimes to death. I found it to be a common practice of the planters to require the Yaqui wife to marry a Chinaman and live with him.

"'We do that,' explained one of the planters to me, 'in order to make the Chinaman better satisfied and less inclined to run away.'"

MERRY DEL VAL RECOVERING TODAY

From an Overdose of an Obesity Cure.

Rome, Oct. 21.—Papal Secretary Merry Del Val is recovering today from the effects of an overdose of an obesity cure, which threw him into violent convulsions last evening, and caused great excitement at the Vatican. The Pope was much alarmed by the sudden attack, which afflicted the secretary.

His holiness and Merry Del Val were alone when the secretary dropped to the floor in a series of violent paroxysms. The Pope hastily summoned Dr. Apecel, the Vatican physician, who succeeded in relieving Del Val after an hour's hard work.

The papal secretary has been taking a mixture designed to relieve him of superfluous flesh and Dr. Apecel said that the violent attack was undoubtedly the result of an overdose of the preparation.

$1,000,000 FIRE LOSS AT DAYTON

Most Disastrous Blaze in History of the City.

THREE BUSINESS BLOCKS DESTROYED

Big Four Railroad Yards Are a Mass of Flames.

Fire Starts in the Plant of the Dayton Computing Scale Company. National Oil Pump and Tank Company Plant Goes Next—Big Four Yards Catch and Then Nine Other Big Plants Suffer.

Dayton, O., Oct. 21.—The most disastrous of this city's many big fires started at the Dayton Computing Scale company's plant, First and Foundry streets, Wednesday night, and swept three big business blocks, causing a loss estimated today at a million dollars. The amount, however, will likely be beyond that. The fire started in the paint department of the scale works on the top floor and within fifteen minutes after the alarm was turned in, the four-story structure was a mass of flame. A strong wind drove the fire until every building for three squares was ignited.

The fire occurred on the same site as the largest previous fire in this city, that of 1898, when the Wolfe tobacco warehouse and adjoining buildings were destroyed.

Railroad Yards Ablaze.

The wind drove the flames from the scale company's building to the opposite side of Madison street, igniting the plant of the National Oil Pump and Tank company. That building was a total loss in twenty minutes. The gale then swept the burning brands across the canal and caught the Big Four freight depot. Small structures in the vicinity and box cars were ignited, and in a short time the railroad yards was a mass of flames.

The following eleven companies suffered losses: Computing Scale, Binns Storage, National Oil and Pump, Pasteur Chamberlain, O. P. Klee Bottling works, Cooper Medicine company, Dayton Steam Roller works, Dayton Motor Car company, William Whitemore Coal company, Big Four railroad, and J. A. Stuart, restaurant. Nothing of these companies' property is left today but ruins.

Less Time; More Pay.

Columbus, O., Oct. 21.—More than 100 job pressmen and press feeders went on a strike here this morning, tieing up the pressrooms of about twenty union shops, while several open shops are affected. The pressmen want an eight-hour instead of a nine-hour work day, while the feeders are demanding an eight-hour day as well as $14 instead of $12 a week.

FATE OF SPAIN IN THE BALANCE

Spanish Cabinet, Headed by Maura, Resigns Thursday,

ON THE DEMAND OF KING ALFONSO

Hunt for a New Prime Minister Is in Progress.

A Member of the Conservative Party, Loyal to the Crown and Accepting the Pro-Church Views in the Anti-Catholic Controversy Would Be the Natural Choice—Difficult To Get Ideal Man for Place.

Madrid, Oct. 21.—After a determined struggle against opposition, not only in Spain, but in all Europe, aroused by Spanish conditions, the cabinet, headed by Premier Maura, resigned today on the express demand of King Alfonso. The Moroccan war, the anti-clerical situation, and the world-wide protest following the execution of Francisco Ferrer, the Barcelona anarchist, were the premier causes of the fall of the cabinet.

The resignation of the cabinet throws Spain into a condition bordering on chaos.

Today King Alfonso and his advisors are in close conference trying to select a man, who, placed at the head of the government, will be able to gather the scattered remnants of Spanish authority together and save Spain from herself. A competent statesman, willing to accept the responsibilities of the situation, will be hard to find.

King Alfonso faces the crisis of his life, for upon his choice of a president of the council—the Spanish prime minister—depends the fate of his throne.

The Natural Choice.

A member of the Conservative party, loyal to the interests of the crown and accepting the royal pro-church views in the anti-Catholic controversy, would be the natural choice. The continuation of the Moroccan war would also undoubtedly be forced by a Conservative. But no Conservative could secure the support of the Liberal cortes, the Socialist element which has been howling down the Maura administration amid scenes of the wildest disorder since it convened a week ago.

Alfonso is most unwilling to trust the nation and, incidentally, his throne to a Liberal minister. He is still more unwilling to take any chance in the consummation of the Moroccan war.

With this situation confronting him, it is considered extremely likely that, when the present excitement dies down, Alfonso may be forced to reinstate Maura, and let him pursue his policy to the end. Meantime, the fate of Spain hangs in the balance.

News Confirmed.

Lisbon, Oct. 21.—Reports received today from Melilla confirm the news that the Riffs are gradually closing in on the Spanish troops at Melilla, wiping out the Spanish outposts, and slowly but surely rendering the forces of General Marina helpless. Native sources are enthusiastically certain that the capture of the town is but a matter of time.

That part of the peninsula of Melilla outside of the town, which the Spanish wrested from the Riffs by weeks of hard fighting at the cost of thousands of lives, is gradually being retaken by the natives. As a consequence the Spaniards have concentrated their whole strength in the town. The Riffs are attacking the present Spanish position continually, urged on by their priests, since they first attacked Sunday morning.

Victim of Conspiracy.

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 21.—That Gutierrez de Lara, held here to await the decision of the federal authorities whether he shall be deported to Mexico, is the victim of a conspiracy, is the charge made today by friends who are fighting for his freedom. They assert that he is not an anarchist as charged and never has uttered anarchistic sentiments.

Cincinnati Is Chosen.

Washington, Oct. 21.—The Carriage Builders' National association today decided to hold its next annual convention at Cincinnati.

DR. M. B. NEWHOUSE DELIVERS AN ADDRESS

Is Heard with Interest by Sunday-School Workers — Mrs. Martha Cramer Is Given Very Pleasant Surprise by a Company of Friends. Richwood Notes.

Richwood Oct. 21.—[Special.]—George Schambs, the ten-year-old son of Mr and Mrs. Edward A. Schambs, was painfully injured, Saturday, in falling from the roof of their residence on south Franklin street. The dwelling is in course of reconstruction and the boy was spending the afternoon watching the carpenters at work on the house, which, when completed, will be the largest in Richwood. He climbed to the top of the framework and in some way lost his balance, falling to the ground, a distance of thirty-five feet. His fall was somewhat broken by a couple of scantling, on which he alighted. He was picked up unconscious by Charles Field, one of the contractors at work on the dwelling, and carried across the street to the office of Drs. W. B. and H. C. Duke. The boy sustained some bruises all over the body and was painfully injured about the head. He was unconscious for about two hours. He was later taken to the Fisher farm just north of Richwood, where his parents are living during the remodeling of their residence.

Mrs. Cramer was spending the evening alone, reading, and had almost forgotten that the day marked the anniversary of her birth. The guests brought baskets filled with the materials for a good supper and it was quickly prepared by ladies of the merry company. Cramer was presented with a number of nice gifts by her friends. Aside from her two sons, Guy C. Cramer and Ernest Cramer and their families, the company was composed of old friends and neighbors of Mrs. Cramer from south of Richwood, where she lived before moving here a few years ago.

Mrs. Amos Tanner was elected treasurer to take the place of Mrs. W. E. Baker. A very interesting report of the county convention held at Broadway a few weeks ago was given by the delegate, Mrs. S. W. Van Winkle, while Mrs. W. H. Husted, delegate to the state convention held two weeks ago at Toledo, gave a complete report of that meeting.

About thirty-five of the neighbors and friends of Mrs. T. J. Mulligan gave her a very pleasant surprise, Monday evening, in honor of her birthday anniversary. The affair was planned by her son, Marion Mulligan and proved very enjoyable. The hours were spent with music and other diversions and an oyster supper was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Mulligan received a number of nice presents from her friends.

Mrs. Lyda Morrow, of Bloomfield, Iowa, spent a few days with her nephew, Charles Adams, and family, of Beatty avenue, during the past week, leaving here Wednesday for Columbus, on her way home. Mrs. Morrow had been in Pittsburg in attendance at a national convention of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Gray spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Klinefelter, east of Marion.

Miss Gail Miller, of Columbus, spent Saturday and Sunday here with her sister, Miss Anna Miller, one of the instructors in the local public schools.

One of the season's pleasant social affairs was held, Tuesday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fisher, southwest of Richwood, when sixty relatives and friends gathered there to celebrate Mrs. Fisher's birthday anniversary. The affair, which was a surprise to the hostess, was planned by Mrs. G. M. Keller and Mrs. O. E. Durfey. Mrs. Owen Cheney, a sister of the hostess, assisted in entertaining the company by the rendition of a number of beautiful piano solos. Mrs. Fisher received a number of nice presents. The guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lattimore, of Mt. Vernon, and Royden McNell, of Columbus.

Daniel T. Robinson is dangerously ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mary Tyler, of Beatty avenue. Mr. Robinson was ninety-four years old August 30.

WILBUR STILLWELL IS ARRAIGNED WEDNESDAY

A Motion To Quash Indictment Is Submitted.

Senator Stillwell Appears for His Brother—Contends Two Separate Offenses Are Charged in One Indictment—The Arguments.

In regard to the case of Wilbur Stillwell, indicted for kidnaping the child of Robert Perdue, the Upper Sandusky Chief says:

Wilbur Stillwell, the Marion law-and-order detective, who was recently indicted here for child stealing, was arraigned before Judge Scofield Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. He was accompanied by a number of Marion business men, who are interested in the cause for which he works. Stillwell was represented by his brother, Senator Stillwell, of Mt. Vernon. That gentleman asked the court for leave to file a motion to quash the indictment. He claimed that it charged both stealing and concealing the child; that these were two separate offenses and for that reason the indictment should be nolled and Mr. Stillwell discharged.

Prosecuting Attorney H. H. Newell, defending the indictment, contended that it merely charged child stealing and that Stillwell should be held. Stillwell's attorneys were given until next Monday to file such motion. It will be argued next Monday morning at 9 o'clock, when Stillwell will be present. The motion will at once be decided, and, if against Stillwell, his plea will at once be entered and time for trial set. This was favorable to the prosecution.

Stillwell was released on a new $500 bond, this bond also being acceptable to the prosecution. The sureties were approved by Clerk of Courts Daniel Reynolds. The bond was signed by Dr. W. A. Crum, of Upper Sandusky; Daniel Lawrence, J. H. Oatey and George M. Rourke, all of Marion.

An Operation.

Guy D. Kendrick passed through a delicate operation at the Central Emergency hospital, Wednesday. The operation was performed by Drs. James W. McMurray and H. L. Uhler. Dr. E. L. Brady administering the anaesthetic. The patient is resting quite easy today and his speedy recovery is looked for.

COPENHAGEN WON'T YIELD

Will Refuse To Stand Aside for America,

IN MATTER OF THE DATA OF DR COOK

Will Insist Upon the Priority of Claim

There Is a Feeling in Denmark That an Attempt is Being Made To Discredit Doctor Cook and the Belief Is Strong That He Will Get Fairer Treatment in Denmark Than in America

Copenhagen Oct 18—Unless better reasons are advanced than have so far been given, the University of Copenhagen will not yield its claim to be the first to examine the North pole discovery data of Dr Frederick A Cook

The university faculty will meet Wednesday to consider the request from the National Geographical Society of America that it waive its claim in favor of the society in view of the great impatience that now exists in America Dr Torp head of the university said today that the university would undoubtedly refuse the request and hold Dr Cook to his promise to submit his evidence to it first

The university is inclined to believe that both the university and the nation's prestige is involved in a waiver of its priority There is also a suspicion in the minds of the Danish public that a move is on foot to discredit Dr Cook No imputation is made that the American Geographical society is connected with such a move but the Danes believe that Dr Cook's case will receive a fairer consideration from the University of Denmark than from any other scientific body

KIDNAPED BY AN EMPLOYE

Of Peter Viviano Are the Two Viviano Children

SO THE BOY TELLS HIS FATHER TUESDAY

Are Treated Kindly by the Kidnapers

The Two Little Ones Are Kept Most of the Time in a Basement of a Frame House Near a Railroad Are Not Allowed To Play About the Yard—Given Toys with Which To Play

Chicago Oct 11—That Samuel Turissi an Italian formerly employed by Peter Viviano a wealthy St Louis macaroni and fruit merchant kidnaped him and his cousin Grace and brought them to Chicago was the statement made today by Tomasso Viviano one of the St Louis children who were found wandering in the streets of Chicago last Thursday night Tomasso made this statement to his father Peter Viviano of St Louis early today The two men were met here by Police Captain Schoppe of the St Louis police force and at once conducted him to the Lying-in hospital where the two children were taken early today Both of the men were overjoyed when they saw their children and hugged and kissed them passionately The police had some difficulty in persuading them to question the two children about their disappearance

Taken Off in Wagon

Peter Viviano father of Tomasso conducted the questioning in Italian The boy said that Sam the man who worked for father took himself and Grace away and put them on a wagon and they drove a long way Then they got on a train and rode a long time presumably direct to Chicago When they got off the train, he said Sam took them to a house where there was a woman and several Italian children Sam told the children to call him Joe and to call the woman mamma

The boy described the house where they were confined only vaguely He said it was a wooden house near the railroad, and that several men and women lived there All the mamma went away every day and men and all the women except came back again at night he said

Can Tell Little

The boy could tell little about the experiences of his cousin and himself during their stay in the house but their personal appearance showed that both had been much neglected

On Thursday night just before dark said the boy mamma took both children out into the street near their house gave them some candy and left them They wandered about for a long time Tomasso said until another woman found them and they were taken to the police station

The boy said however that Sam treated them both well and gave them toys to play with When the children were taken to the house said the boy mamma took them at once down into the ground—basement—and kept them there almost continuously

Are Well Fed

Mamma would not let them play with the other children Tomasso said and she fed them bread and jelly whenever they got hungry When they wanted to play the boy said mamma would give him a ball and Grace a doll but they rarely were permitted to go out into the yard around the house

The elder Viviano is anxious to take the children back to St Louis tonight but it is doubtful if little Grace will be able to stand the trip When found she was thinly clad and had caught a bad cold which has developed into pneumonia The nurses attending her said at noon that it meant endangering her life to take her to St Louis in her present condition

Captain of Rowanmore Becomes Suspicious and Threatens To Shoot First Man Who Steps Aboard His Decks—Other Vessels Report Appearance of Suspicious Looking Schooner

Galveston Tex Oct 19—Officers and the crew of the British steam ship Rowanmore Captain Phelan have reported to the collector of the port that an attempt had been made to board the vessel by a piratical crew A detailed report of the affair has been wired to the department at Washington and it is urged that the government dispatch cutters or other armed vessels to the Bahama Islands in quest of the strange barks plying in that part of the Atlantic

According to the report the Rowanmore bound from Liverpool to Galveston encountered the strange schooner about dusk on the evening of Oct 1 about 11 miles northeast of Cayoforte shoal light to the east of Florida The schooner was flying the distress signal the Greek flag at half mast and when the British ship came alongside four men on the deck of the rakish craft attempted to board the vessel Captain Phelan stopped them and demanded to know what was wanted The captain of the schooner said he wanted to leave the schooner which was disabled but the captain of the Rowanmore could see the schooner was in good condition The leader of the schooner the name of which could not be made out then said he was short of food for 10 men and Captain Phelan offered to send food without having any of the schooner's crew come aboard

Other Heads Appear

About this time other heads appeared above the cabin of the schooner and in the dim light the schooner swung around aft of the ship and three men from the strange craft whose name the leader said was the Lion Pace attempted to climb the anchor chains of the steamship The crew of the vessel was summoned and Captain Phelan and officers armed with guns threatened to shoot the first man that came close The yawl on which were the three who had attempted to board the steamer and two others put back to the schooner The commander of the Lion Pace swore fiercely at his own crew for their failure and at the British vessel as the schooner ran to cover among the small isles

It is said several other ships have recently reported strange schooners approaching vessels on the Bahamas but this is the first real attempt made to board a steamer

CONAN DOYLE ON CRIME IN CONGO

Noted Author Pays a Debt to Humanity,

BY EXPOSING THE ATROCITIES THERE

Committed Under the Rule of Belgium

Doyle Will Not Take Profit for His Work Which Will Be Printed in Many Languages and Sold as Cheap as Ten Cents To Arouse the Nations of the World to Horrors of Situation

London Oct 18—The Crime of the Congo a book written by Sir A Conan Doyle by which he hopes to arouse the entire civilized world to a realization of the atrocities committed in the Congo by the Belgian government is just off the press

The book is a scathing arraignment of Belgium course in the Congo written after a personal and exhaustive study at first hand of the conditions there and is to be published also in America and translated into every civilized tongue

In order that the book may be as widely read as possible arrangements are being made for its sale at practically cost price and a cheap edition will likely be issued to sell at ten cents Doyle will take no profits from the book He says he is paying a debt to humanity by writing the book and does not wish to profit financially from it

Horrible Atrocities

The author prefaces his description of conditions in the Congo by the intimation that no hope for reform can be had from Belgium There will be the usual talk of reform he says but the world has seen this game too often Surely it will not be made a fool of again There is some limit to European patience

Belgium has enacted one long horrible tragedy, Doyle writes vouched for by priests and missionaries traders travelers and consuls all corroborated but in no way reformed by a Belgium commission The natives have seen these unhappy people who were their wards robbed of all they possessed, debauched degraded mutilated tortured murdered all on such a scale as has never to my knowledge happened before in the whole course of history and now after years with all the facts notorious we are still at the stage of polite diplomatic expostulation

At Leopold's Door

It is upon the king always the king that the guilt must lie There is no possible subterfuge by which the moral guilt can be deflected from the head of the state the man who went to Africa for the freedom of commerce and the regeneration of the native "

After describing King Leopold's creation of the Congo Free State and the readiness with which other nations recognized Belgium's authority believing it to be the beginning of a reign of progress Doyle tells of the laws passed by which the natives were despoiled by the government of their lands

Having obtained possession of the land and its products Doyle says the next step was to obtain labor by which these products could be safely garnered An act for the special protection of the black was passed It allows blacks to be bound over in terms of seven years service to their masters in a manner which was in truth indistinguishable from slavery As the negotiations were usually carried on with the head man the unfortunate servant was transferred with small profit to himself and little knowledge of the conditions of his bond

Under the same system the state also enlisted its employes in hunting the recruits for its small army The army was supplemented by a body of militia consisting of warriors built up of tribes many of them cannibal and all of them capable of any excess of cruelty or outrage

King Leopold's agents were protected by employing men who worked under tribal customs and ... they were ... and they had orders to ... certain amount of rubber from the districts ... head men who were ... these capitas were armed with ... and were masters of the natives ... the ... which they preyed ... natives could not supply ... the capitas ... the ... about the ... he beat the native ... telephone and other corporations were given a knockout blow by the supreme court today

The delay was endured but the decision rendered by the court is so plain that it will not admit of any other construction than that franchises granted which are silent as to their duration are not perpetual but merely indeterminate subsisting only so long as the parties to it may be mutually satisfied and no longer Hence any city may at any time annul a franchise that does not stipulate the years which it is to run

The claim of street railway companies in most of the cities of the state to franchises over streets in the older parts of the city have furnished much annoyance in the past These franchises were granted before the legislature enacted the law limiting such grants to twenty five years as never ... or any other period Hence they were silent as to duration While there has been strenuous disputes several cities now having suits in the courts to test them over these claims to be perpetual street railway franchises it has been apparently universally accepted that gas electric light and telephone franchises have been in perpetuity for seldom if ever has a term of years been fixed as to such grants

But all supposedly perpetual franchises are swept away by today's decision

The sweeping settlement of many questions in one came as a mere incident in the case of the East Ohio Gas company against the city of Akron where the gas company wanted to abandon the town because council has fixed a rate too low to suit it and the city contended that the supply of gas could not be withdrawn and the pipes of the company removed

The supreme court holds that the company may withdraw if dissatisfied as the city may terminate an indefinite contract when no longer satisfied with it

The paragraph in the syllabus in the decision of the supreme court in the Akron gas case which disposes of the mooted perpetual franchise questions with one sweep reads as follows

When the contract between a municipal corporation and an incorporated company is silent as to the duration of the franchise such franchise is not perpetual but the duration thereof is simply indeterminate existing so long as the parties mutually agree thereto

Under the decision any franchise which does not stipulate a definite period of duration may be terminated at any time by either the city or the public service corporation

William Buchanan Dies in London Ambulance

Found About Midnight Saturday but It Is Not Known That He Is an American Diplomat Until Sunday Noon—Speaking Spanish Like a Native He Is Able To Accomplish Much Where Others Failed

London Oct 18—An inquest into the death of William I Buchanan one of America's leading diplomats who was stricken on the sidewalk in front of No 10 Pall Mall Saturday night will be held Wednesday

The coroner announced today that there was no doubt that death resulted from heart disease and that an inquest would be purely perfunctory

Among the effects of the dead diplomat was a large package of papers dealing with his diplomatic missions The ... now in custody of Whitelaw Reid the American ambassador

Mr Buchanan's death was a great shock to his many American friends here as he appeared to be in robust health He came to London last Thursday from Berlin He was found unconscious on the sidewalk a few minutes before midnight The stricken man was placed in an ambulance which started for St George hospital but death resulted before the hospital was reached

Mr Buchanan's name was found on cards in his pocket but the fact that he was an American diplomat was not discovered until noon Sunday when the manager of the hotel called at the hospital and recognized the body

The American state department was immediately notified as was the wife of the dead man who lives in Buffalo New York

The autopsy showed that Mr Buchanan died of heart disease

Right Hand Man

Washington Oct 18—William I Buchanan was the right hand man of the state department in its dealings with South and Central American countries Because of his long residence among them both in an official capacity and as the representative of large American business interests he had acquired a knowledge of the temperament of the South Americans which was invaluable in dealing with the sensitive susceptibilities of the race Speaking Spanish like a native he was popular among them and was able to accomplish things where other diplomats failed

Buchanan's latest service was as the special diplomatic representative of the United States to the new government of Venezuela established by General Gomez following the departure of Castro to Europe The United States had five important claims pending against Venezuela which Castro had repeatedly refused to arbitrate Buchanan effected an agreement on four of these with the new Gomez administration The fifth the claim of the Orinoco corporation to a large concession of valuable timber and mining land it was agreed to send to The Hague court for arbitration

TWO DEATHS AS DIRECT RESULT

Of Closing Doors of Bank at Mineral Point.

ACROSS GRAVE OF HIS FATHER

Body of Bank Cashier Found During Night.

His Mother-in-Law Dies as a Result of Shock Upon Receiving News of His Death—Frank Hanscom, the Dead Cashier, in No Way at Fault for Difficulties of the Bank. His Accounts Correct.

Mineral Point, Wis., Oct. 18. — Two persons are dead here today as the result of the closing of the doors of the First National bank of Mineral Point, following the disclosure of a $200,000 shortage in the bank's accounts.

One of the victims, Frank Hanscom, fifty-five, is cashier of the institution, who went to his father's grave in Graceland cemetery and late last night sent a bullet into his brain. The second tragedy quickly followed the first, Hanscom's mother-in-law, Mrs. John Gray, an aged woman, dropping dead of the shock when told of his suicide.

Hanscom had been an employe of the bank since its foundation in 1884 and for ten years had been its cashier. When the comptroller of the currency closed the doors of the institution after Vice President Phillip Allen, Jr., had admitted taking $200,000 of its money; Hanscom's books were carefully examined. They were found to be in excellent condition, according to reports here, but Hanscom was despondent because the failure had wiped out most of his personal fortune and because he feared the public would blame him for the crash. Mrs. John Gray also was a heavy loser when the bank failed.

Hanscom disappeared from his home late yesterday. When he failed to return at 10 o'clock p. m., his relatives started out to search for him. They found his body in Graceland cemetery lying across the grave of his father who had died some years ago. At his side was a revolver, and there was a gaping wound in his head. He left no note explaining his act.

The relatives hastened back to town to inform his wife and mother-in-law. When Mrs. Gray was notified she screamed suddenly, and fell back dead, a victim of heart failure.

Hanscom was one of the most popular men in Mineral Point, and during the investigation of the affairs of the bank his personal honesty was never impugned. Just what effect his suicide will have on the affairs of the bank is not known.

Receiver John C. Seofield is in charge. He was appointed by the comptroller of the currency when the latter closed the bank's doors on information furnished by National Bank Examiner Goodart.

Immediately following the bank's failure, Vice President Phillip Allen, Jr., whose investments caused the crash, was placed under arrest, on charges of forgery and embezzlement. He is seriously ill in his home here, but will be taken to Madison and arraigned as soon as he is able to be moved.

Arrangements for Big Fight Near End.

Former Champion Will Reach New York Thursday and Promises To Get Busy at Once in Matter of Posting Forfeit and Considering Offers—Coffroth May Secure Battle for Colma Arena.

New York, Oct. 18.—It is now up to James J. Jeffries to either make a match with Jack Johnson for the heavyweight championship or admit that he does not intend to re enter the prize ring. Jeff is on the Lusitania, which will reach here early Thursday morning, and has promised to make arrangements for the big fight without further delay. Johnson will be in Chicago probably by the end of the week, and says he will be ready to sign articles and post a forfeit to go as a side bet.

Johnson's victory over Ketchel, the latter being knocked out in the twelfth round, has put the pugilistic situation squarely up to Jeffries. The sporting public is ready to admit that Jeff is the only white man in the world who has the physical strength and science necessary to bring about the defeat of Johnson, and at that there are many followers of pugilism who doubt Jeff's ability to whip the negro.

Jeffries said in London that as soon as he reached this city he would confer with Sam Berger, his manager, who made a sort of tentative agreement with Johnson last August which amounted to practically nothing. Jeff also said with apparent sincerity that if Johnson defeated Ketchel the colored champion would have to make the match that has been widely discussed for nearly a year.

There need be no wrangle over the purse or battleground for the Jeff Johnson fight, for Promoter Coffroth, who will be here on Saturday, probably will make an offer which will secure the fight for Colma. If Johnson and Ketchel drew a $55,000 gate at popular prices, it is believed that the Jeff-Johnson mill in the same arena would attract at least twice that amount.

Will Have To Be Good.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—Jim Jeffries will have to be in as good form as when he retired from the ring if he is to regain the world's pugilistic championship for the white race.

This is the opinion of nine-tenths of the men who saw Jack Johnson play with Stanley Ketchel for eleven rounds at Colma Saturday, and then polish off the white boy with a whirlwind attack in the twelfth. Before the fight, there were hundreds of Frisco sports who took Johnson's championship claim as a joke, and thought all that would be needed to pluck his doubtful laurels would be to send "Big Jeff" against him, regardless of whether Jeffries was at his best.

These people have radically revised their opinion, and it is now realized that only the "Jeffries of old," the Jeffries that for years stood unapproachable in the heavyweight ranks, will have any chance against the big and crafty Johnson. And even if Jeffries has come back, the sports now believe he will have the biggest undertaking of his career to add the colored man's scalp to his imposing collection.

His Classiest Form.

Fight fans are inclined to think that in his fight with Ketchel, Johnson showed the classiest form of his career. Many are of the opinion that it was the first time that he really has shown true championship caliber.

Johnson's fights with Jack O'Brien, Tony Ross and Al Kaufman since his return from Australia were anything but high-class exhibitions and gave rise to the belief that the colored man was a "shine." True, he never extended himself in any of these fights, but making all allowances, the sports wouldn't believe that Jack had it in him. Every doubt was removed in his fight with Ketchel, and that, too, without Johnson letting himself out to the limit. It was another case of a good big man against a good little man, with the usual result. Ketchel was so outclassed that it appeared to many that he was lacking in aggressiveness. But he was not. He simply could not get to Johnson.

Johnson Proves Crafty.

The colored man usually managed to brush Ketchel aside as though it were the rankest presumption on the part of the latter to attempt to "mix" with him.

Either Ketchel hasn't the "kick of a mule," or else Johnson can stand more punishment than the critics have supposed, for Ketchel landed several of his famous wallops without seriously disturbing Johnson's balance.

The "knockdown" that Ketchel delivered in the final round was a fine bit of craftiness on Johnson's part, for he sprang from his supposedly distressed position and finished the fight with a fusillade of blows that stunned the big crowd as well as the luckless Ketchel.

Johnson picked up $26,200 by his victory, including his side bet of $5,000. Ketchel got $6,900 of the gross receipts of $33,000, but he lost his $5,000 side bet and he is only $1,900 ahead. The receipts were the largest in San Francisco in years.

Johnson's Weak Spot.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—Though Stanley Ketchel in defeat was a pretty badly battered fighter, he declared today that he believed he had made an important discovery.

That is, that Jack Johnson's vulnerable point is not in his "bread basket," as is the case with most black fighters, but it is on the jaw far back near the ear.

"If Jeffries will play for Johnson's head all the time when they meet and never mind his stomach, he will get the black man sure as fate," said Ketchel today.

Ketchel thinks the blow which knocked Johnson down in the twelfth round of their fight, Saturday, really hurt the black. Most of the spectators thought Johnson merely faked the knockdown to make the moving pictures better but Johnson himself admits that the blow hurt. It is pointed out that Ketchel landed only one hard blow on Johnson's jaw and that that one, while not nearly so hard as Ketchel is capable of delivering, put the negro to the floor.

VIEWS OF KEY WEST, WHERE HURRICANE CAUSED BIG LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY

Key West and the islands along the west coast of Florida were cut off from the outer world for many hours following the great hurricane that swept in from the West Indies, destroying many lives and millions of dollars' worth of shipping and other property. Practically every house in Key West proper suffered damage, according to the first reports, and the heaviest loss of life was on the keys along the coast. The damage in Key West and its immediate vicinity was estimated at $3,000,000. The hurricane visited Havana with great fury, driving several vessels ashore and destroying a large amount of property in the city. The Florida East Coast railway also came in for considerable loss. Martial law was at once declared in Key West, and all vagrants along the water front were arrested to prevent looting. The storm left a trail of ruin as it crossed the peninsula.

THREE BARNS DAMAGED IN A BLAZE MONDAY

Barn of Jacob Berry Is Totally Destroyed

OTHER BUILDINGS ARE SAVED BY FIREMEN

A Horse Belonging to David Hinaman Is Somewhat Burned but Will Probably Recover—Fireman Injured by a Horse Falling—Loss of About $700 Suffered by Fire

The barn of Jacob Berry of north State street was totally destroyed by fire shortly after ... o'clock Monday afternoon while the barn of William Hayden and the barn of Clifford Cass both caught fire and were damaged considerably

An unfortunate line of circumstances was connected with the fire or the barn of Hayden and Cass would have escaped damage When the blaze was discovered in the Berry barn it had gained good headway When the alarm of fire was telephoned to the Central department one of the horses of the chemical wagon was at the blacksmith shop of Charles Eye on north State street Chief McFarland then telephoned the No 2 department to respond to the blaze Driver C N Thurston who had the horse at the shop hurried with the animal to the department In turning off State onto Church street the horse slipped and fell Thurston being thrown to the pavement and the horse falling on his left leg Thurston limped with the horse to the department and soon had him in harness making a fast drive to the scene of the blaze As a result of the accident Thurston is suffering a strained leg

In the meantime a bit of good work was done at the barn A fine black driving mare belonging to David Hinaman was in the Berry barn The building was enveloped in flames so that it was impossible to enter to rescue the horse J M Holverstott opened the doors of the barn and prodded the animal with a clothes prop until he caused it to tear from its fastenings and rush to safety When the horse came through the door its mane was in flames and Mr Holverstott brushed out the blaze with the prop The horse was burned on the sides and back but it is thought it will recover

The Berry barn was beyond hope of being saved even had the department not been delayed When the department arrived it looked as much as if the Hayden barn would be destroyed but by good work it was saved A horse in the structure was taken out before the barn caught fire The roof was nearly burned off and some hay destroyed The roof of the Cass barn was but slightly damaged Four barns are located on the four corners of the alleys and that more damage was not done was due to the good work of the firemen Two cables of the Marion County Telephone company were burned in two about 150 phones being thrown out of commission and causing a heavy loss to the company The damage by fire is estimated at $700

In tearing down the burned barn H D Cline captain of the No 2 department had a narrow escape from falling Cline was walking on the charred rafters of the haymow floor throwing off the boards of the floor and some hay The rafters on which he was standing gave way and just as he was about to fall to the burned bottom he threw up his hands and caught a rafter overhead Here he hung suspended for several minutes his clothing catching on a nail After releasing himself he went hand over hand on the burned rafter to a place of safety

The International Sunday-School Lesson for October 24 Is Paul a Prisoner before Festus and Agrippa Acts 25 6—26 32

THE APPEAL TO CAESAR

By William T Ellis

A man regnant in manhood, though chained to a jailer and standing for his highest rights in the face of kings that is the spectacle which some twenty five million Sunday school members are called upon to consider this week The adventurous hero Paul whose stirring career has been the theme of study for weeks is once more brought forth from his Caesarea prison in order to appear before another ruler, and on this occasion he delivers one of his most celebrated orations The incident links itself very closely to the life of today

Governor Felix the grafter had left Paul in prison as a sop to the ecclesiastical party in Jerusalem He was the sort of public man who could not do a direct disinterested deed his very nature had become such that he could not help playing politics Another truckling politician Festus was sent to represent Rome in the control of this turbulent Jewish province He went early to Jerusalem to make himself solid with the leaders of the Pharisees there who promptly tried to prevail on him to send his noted prisoner down to Jerusalem for trial—meaning all the while to carry out the long deferred plot of assassinating Paul en route The malignant enmity of the Jews toward the apostate member of their high court seemed to have no bounds Yet it never turned Paul against his nation Walpole's cynical remark I should love my country if it were not for my countrymen has no parallel in his utterance His magnanimous spirit is typified by the words My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved Such sentiments as this give us the true measurement of this saint in chains

I Appeal to the Emperor"

The humblest Roman citizen could appeal from the decision of any judge to the emperor himself When the sycophantic Festus suggested to curry favor with the Jews that Paul consent to the improper procedure of standing trial in Jerusalem the great saint blazed forth in words of manliness that thrill the reader

Now I am standing at the Emperor's bar the place where I ought to be tried I have not wronged the Jews as you yourself can see clearly enough If however I have done wrong and have committed any offense deserving death I do not ask to escape it but if there is nothing in the accusations of these people no one has power to give me up to them I appeal to the Emperor

The diseased ... all the machinations of enemies were thwarted to Rome Paul must now go conveyed over the safest route by all the power of Caesar What a strange way to fulfill his eager expectation to meet with the Christians at Rome Some persons with more of the protoplasm in their composition than is proper for man in this stage of his development cannot understand why men should be stood up for their rights Their conception of rights are of things to be surrendered They seem to believe that the place of Christians is underfoot Paul knew better He saw clearly that there are times when to stand for rights is to stand for God Truth and right must be defended at every cost man is man in godliest guise when he is championing truth in the face of organized wrong

Truth's utter sacredness is an old old note that needs to be sounded again and again There is a timidity about organized and vested religion interests that forgetting Jesus and Paul and all their noble train inclines to make compromise with expediency for the sake of the work All the good work in the world is not so important as the utter freedom of truth It is better that all endowment be forfeited all religious organizations disintegrate and all ecclesiastical structures crumble into dust than that chains or muzzles should be put upon truth A poet of today Edward S Martin singingly says

I pray Thee Lord that when it comes to me
To say if I will follow truth and Thee
Or choose instead to win as better worth
My pains some loving recompense of earth
Grant me great Father from hard truth to hold
Lest spent all upon a battered shield
How to old endurance to be borne
Rather than by my own mean gains to scorn
Far better fall with face turned to the sod
At one with wisdom and my ... worn o...
Than ever come to see myself prevail
When to succeed at last is but to fail
Mean ... and there within content
Save me from that Direct Thou the event
As suits Thy will wherever the path go
Grant me the ... that my soul may grow

A Trial as a Function

Court rooms crowded with men and women representatives of wealth and leisure are no new ... When King Herod Agrippa II came to congratulate the new governor of Judea a fresh trial of Paul was held for his interest The occasion was a splendid with social lustre In the center of the sumptuous court room—the very one in which his rotten father had fallen dead while being acclaimed a god—the incestuous Agrippa and beautiful dissolute ... wife were seated upon overthrones Gleaming cohorts of Roman soldiers in full dress uniform lined the walls The nobility of the whole region both Roman and Jewish crowded the magnificent hall eager to be seen as courtiers and to see for themselves the fascinating infamous Bernice and her husband renegade Jews both and the famous prisoner Paul once a member of the Sanhedrin now the chief apostle of the Christian Way It was a sumptuous setting for Paul's sermon and he was glad to preach the gospel to an company of people though he had seldom confronted more ... than at this most elaborate judicial social function

There stands Massachusetts' ... Daniel Webster on a memorable occasion when he called upon to defend his state There ... life ... Paul in his defense He was in the happy condition of a man who can appeal to his past in justification for his present He needed no other argument than his own life story and that he told with an eloquence that held his hearers enrapt He made it very plain specially to Agrippa the Jew that it was not for any personal misdemeanor he was on trial but for a great hope for the ideal of a patriot and of a prophet

A Vision and Its Servant

There are ... ringing ... and ... majesty which have made them a familiar quotation in literature about the words I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision Paul had related how he had been arrested in the mid ... of his persecutions of the Christians by the appearance of Jesus He the scholar the logician the ... Pharisee had been converted by a vision It is the vision of Jesus that smites men's pride and constrains them to discipleship The world and the church today need supremely the vision of the crucified risen Redeemer

That vision made Paul its servant It sent him forth a restless wanderer upon the face of the earth caring naught for the ends to which men commonly devote their powers but seeking every day and night by all means to win men to the Vision Braving truth's tempests he went forth to obey the Voice the knightliest servant of man and God that has ever followed in the footsteps of the Hero To high and low rich and poor Jew and barbarian king and mob he proclaimed in season and out of season his message of a crucified risen Christ

A Royal Interruption

Eager to ingratiate himself further into the favor of his royal guests Festus who had been restless and embarrassed by the manner in which his prisoner was preaching to this select congregation brought the proceedings to a sudden end by rising up and crying in a loud voice Paul thou art mad thy much learning doth turn thee to madness What a sensation How the crowd must have been startled and how the incident set tongues to wagging that day in the luxurious Roman baths and about the banqueting tables Had he been Paul's assistant Festus could not have more adroitly focussed attention upon the preacher's point

Such a ready debater as Paul could make the most of an interruption He adroitly turned the incident into a direct decision from Agrippa putting the latter face to face with his personal responsibility A sermon that is a message cannot easily be spoiled

Right here comes Agrippa's answer which calls for the loyalty to truth on the part of students that indicated either in the Lesson Agrippa did not say as the old version words Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian Cynically and ... and egotistically he rejoined With but little persuasion thou wouldst make me a Christian —as it were preposterous to contemplate of the great Agrippa being subject for preacher's argument

In a flash came the noblest utterance of the ... would to God that whether little or with much not ... but also all that hear me ... might become such as I ... these bonds He knew ... the truly honorable ... he was but a prisoner ... Rome

AUTOMOBILES AND CAR IN ACCIDENT

They Crash into Each Other at a Street Corner.

OCCUPANTS OF THE AUTO NOT INJURED

The Cars Are Very Badly Damaged. One Car Is Traveling on Wrong Side of the Street—A Bad Combination of Circumstances Leads to Collision—Fortunate Ending.

Pedestrians in the vicinity of the corner of Prospect and Center streets were the witnesses of an automobile collision, about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, in which the witnesses expected the occupants of the cars would be killed or seriously injured. Fortunately all escaped with only a shaking up. Both cars were badly damaged.

Dr F. M. Baldwin was driving his touring car south on Prospect street at a lively clip and at the same time H. Daniels, of Upper Sandusky, was driving his large Buick touring car from the west on Center street at a good rate of speed. Daniels was on the wrong side of the street and this may have been fortunate for Dr. Baldwin. The two cars met a the corner. Dr. Baldwin's car striking the other car broadside. At the same time a street car was passing to the west. The Daniels car was shoved against the street car and knocked back to the curbing while the Baldwin car was turned almost completely around. In the car with Mr Daniels was Mr. Bonney, proprietor of the Hotel Godfrey, at Upper Sandusky.

Mr. Bonney stated that but for Dr. Baldwin hitting the car of Daniels he could not see how he could have missed going into the street car. Neither of the drivers of the wrecked cars held the other to blame. The front axles of the cars were badly bent and the mud guards and headlights were damaged. Daniels was able to drive his car home and left after some minor repairs were made.

Dr. Baldwin states that unfortunately there was a bad combination of circumstances in the accident. He says the street car slowed down just when it was expected to keep moving, that the Daniels car was curtained so the driver could not see him approaching and a woman and child were crossing the street in such a position that it was necessary to take his chances in a collision or run them down. Had they no less in the street he claims he could have avoided the mix-up.

VETERAN WATCHMAN DIES FRIDAY NIGHT

Richard Lahey Passes Away at Home of Sister.

RESIDES IN MARION A GREAT MANY YEARS

The Deceased Serves the Big Four as a Crossing Watchman Thirty Years and Is Oldest in Point of Service in Employ of Company When He Retires—Funeral Services.

Richard Lahey, aged eighty years, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Margaret O'Donnell, of Campbell street, shortly after 10 o'clock Friday night. Death was due to old age, the deceased having been confined to his bed for the past month as the result of infirmities.

Richard Lahey was born in Ireland and came to Marion in 1853, making his home here since that time. He was very well known throughout the city and county and was probably one of the best-known employes in the service of the Big Four Railroad company. The deceased was the oldest crossing watchman of the Big Four in point of service when he retired. He had served as crossing watchman for over thirty years. Almost all of this time he watched the Main street crossing for the company and owing to his watchfulness and steady observance of his duties never an accident occurred at his crossing during his service with the company.

The deceased was a cripple and owing to his advanced years retired from the service of the Big Four about three years ago. Aside from his large circle of distant friends and relatives, the deceased leaves two sisters and one brother. They are Mrs. Bridget Reardon, of Sidney, Mrs Anna Beggs, of Galion, and Michael Lahey, of Columbus.

The funeral was conducted, Monday morning, from St. Mary's church and interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

THREE UNION LABOR LEADERS CONCERNED IN CONTEMPT CASE

On his return to Washington after his trip to Europe, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was greeted by one of the most representative gatherings ever assembled in the Capital City. Labor leaders from many parts of the United States were present to pay tribute to their chief, and a parade of several thousand union workers escorted him to his hotel. The demonstration was significant because of the pending decision of the supreme court of the District of Columbia regarding the contempt proceedings against Mr. Gompers, Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation, and John Mitchell. The sentence promulgated against these men by Justice Wright, of the District court, last December —fixing Gompers' punishment in the boycott case at one year in jail, Mitchell's at nine months and Morrison's at six months—has been an issue ever since.

GEORGE W. KING TALKS OF TRIP

Finds Much of Interest in a Trip Abroad

HOLLAND PROVES GREAT COUNTRY

The Dutch Are Overlooked by Many Tourists

A View of the English, Germans and French—Germany Is Rapidly Advancing in a Commercial Way—England Shows Some Signs of Retrograding—The Story of a Famous Windmill in Germany

George W. King, Marion's distinguished manufacturer and honored citizen, home from his first trip abroad, saw the commercial side of the old world with the keen eyes of an American captain of industry. Industrial, commercial Europe naturally came under his observation.

"America's good enough for me. Germany has a good deal of hustle but nothing like that of our own."

These were Mr. King's first words when a reporter for the Star found him in the gardens of his palatial home. He was in his shirt sleeves assisting two men in the construction of a rockwork around a skylight for an underground boat house near the beautiful lake. When the job was completed he talked of his European trip as he walked slowly to the big house.

With his family Mr. King had visited England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and France. Seated in the privacy of his office den he spoke most interestingly of his observations. But it was not in England, France, Germany, Austria or Switzerland, that he derived the greatest pleasure. It remained for quaint old Holland, quaint now only in spots, to furnish the greatest treat of the entire trip. It was the Dutch—a people who were the laughing stock of polite Europe for more than a century, who were called butter firkins, swillers of beer and schnaps, whose women were called the synonyms of clumsy vulgarity, yet from whom, as James Russell Lowell puts it, Holbein painted his all but loveliest Madonnas. Rembrandt the graceful girl who sits immortal upon his knee in Dresden and Rubens his abounding goddesses, a country whose people as life as living's time were represented as sailing equally well their ships stern foremost and where during that very century of scorn lived not only the world's greatest navigators but the best artists, merchants, bankers, scholars and statesmen of all Europe.

Small wonder that Mr. King said "Ah what a country!" On the pretty little island of Marken he observed the Dutch in pristine simplicity. They may not be as of much interest to most tourists as the more refined residents of the Netherlands, but to Mr. King they offered a fine study, their manners, being more simple, their habits of living less luxurious and their opinions more nearly allied to virtue.

Here the men fish in summer and lie around home in winter," said Mr. King. "Farming is done largely by the women. This island has not been visited by tourists until the last three or four years, so we find the inhabitants in practically their primitive state. The men still wear knee pants, wooden shoes and peculiar shaped coats with little caps and tip ring hats. They all look alike.

The women wear wooden shoes and dresses that strike them half way between knee and ankle. With their abundance of petticoats they look full and tufty, yet they are not at all bad looking. They have a peculiar dress of the hair with curls hanging out of odd little caps. A grandma in their dresses just like her grandchild of five. If there be a distinction in fashion you will notice it on the apron or bodice. The more elaborate the fancy work on these, the more wealthy or well to do the wearer. Otherwise there is no difference in their appearance.

"I want to tell you how they make hay here. The women do the work. First it is piled on what we would call a ladder, two long sticks with cross bars, and carried across. The hay is then in the center and with women at each end is carried from the meadow to the adjoining ditch and loaded on a small boat. Then it is taken through the ditches to the dock where it is thrown on stretchers again and carried by women to the hay merchant, who by the way are all men. The men will weigh each stretcher of hay by means of a lever fastened up with a weight to make a sort of a balance, the hay being piled on until it balances and weighing possibly 100 pounds. The merchants watch the women load the hay which after the weight is taken is thrown on a barge and taken to Amsterdam or other important cities.

The primitive way of making hay reminded Mr. King of the days when he made his first hay loader in Marion county and his dark eyes sparkled pleasantly when the reporter drew the contrast.

"The remarkable part of the island is that the appearance of tourists has not yet changed the original native costumes and customs," continued Mr. King. "This is due to its isolation. The people appear to be very happy. The men and women are nice looking, and it was by far the most interesting place we saw because of its quaintness and original simplicity. Ah, what a country!

"The houses were nice and clean here, although small and simple, with red tiled roofs and consisting principally of kitchen and living room. In some instances there was only one room which was used for kitchen, living room and bedroom. The beds had the appearance of closets with curtains drawn over the openings, a partition wall forming three sides of the bed, there being no bedstead but merely a shelf or bunk for father and mother with another shelf for the baby across the foot at a higher elevation. The larger children had their sleeping quarters under the bed of the parents. A very unsanitary way of sleeping was this on account of the insufficient air, but it is their custom and there is no one to change it. The fact that they spend a great deal of their time out of doors probably prevents them from being unhealthy."

But the conditions thus so well depicted by Mr. King are not true of all Holland. Indeed Holland is very progressive, and the quaint old pictures that the artists are wont to paint of the wooden shod Dutch girl are no longer representative type of the Hollander of today. Seventy five per cent of the people one meets in the streets will answer you in English.

"Only occasionally will the tourist see old women and girls in the odd dress," Mr. King says. "The most of them wear modern dresses today and you could hardly tell them from Americans. The wooden shoes are an exception and not the rule any more. In Amsterdam, a large town, nearly every street has a canal through the center. Holland farmers use boats instead of wagons. Some wagons are used of course, but the greater portion of Holland products are boated to market. A large part of the country would be under water were the dykes removed. The canals are used both to drain the land and for commercial purposes. The boats are pushed by means of a long pole."

Mr. King was impressed with the great number of canals and volunteered the opinion that the famous Marion steam shovel could be used to advantage in digging them. He saw no steam shovels however. He described to the Star how through power of the windmills the water was pumped from one lock to another in the canal until it reached sea level.

"Holland has ideal grazing," Mr. King continued, seemingly unwilling to stop talking about that country. "We have nothing to compare with it. There is grazing six months in the year. The winters are not as cold as ours, there being three or four inches of ice and it does not last long. Holland is a fine old country with a fine old people. They've got lots of cheese and a lot of ginger."

Mr. King and his family sailed for England from New York June 22. This is a view of England as obtained from Marion's industrial king.

"England's a fine old country and there are many very nice old things there. But England today in my opinion is on the wane. Still now don't misunderstand me, she is a most important country. Industrially she is not advancing as Germany. England has her fine schools, her fine colleges. I talked to some of the college people over there. They told me that their training had been classical, but that they are now figuring on more technical schools. We are coming over to your country and get some of your professors and we're going to Germany for the same purpose,' one college man told me.

"It is an easy matter to raise money for a technical school and procure trained professors to teach the practical as well as the theoretical side of education. At Oxford I saw men past fifty years of age still going to school spending their whole lives in Greek and Latin. The professors are profound in the dead languages but do not know how to turn it to a commercial value. They are English gentlemen to catch our point of view, but the making of the change will not be as easy as some of them think it will.

"Generally speaking, the English man has been and is still a great man. He stands on his dignity and thinks he is important—well, just because he is important. He doesn't seem to quite realize that the United States and Germany are gaining around him.

"Simulating the Briton who really believes that he bears Europe upon his back and fancies himself moving through Bloomsbury where his mere appearance confers honor upon a mortal of the countries of the universe," Mr. King remarked "after all the fellow who gets left is the fellow who thinks he can't, dontcherknow."

Mr. King looked thoughtfully out of the window and added: "But England has a great army of nicely drilled soldiers, well dressed and well kept. One sees a good many women doing work out there, too, but not so noticeable is this in England as in the other countries of Europe. They seem to think a great deal of their king.

"Many Englishmen are beginning to talk tariff. They say other countries, including the United States, send their goods into England on account of their free trade policy and selling it in competition with their own people. American shoes lead the world in every country, even where a duty of one dollar a pair must be paid.

From England the Kings went to Belgium. "The prevailing language there is French," Mr. King said. "Ostend was our first stop. It is a fashionable watering place but its beach does not compare with our own Atlantic City. Brussels is somewhat progressive but burdened with the army. While there we attended a birthday celebration of the king. It was a very ceremonious ceremony in a big cathedral, all the representatives wearing their native dress. We saw the palace of justice at Brussels. The city was originally built on low ground where the streets were canals as in Venice. It is all changed now. There are many fine picture galleries and collections of art here.

The next place of interest was the famous battleground at Waterloo where June 18, 1815, after viewing the terrible battle from a convenient distance and seeing that defeat was to be his destiny, Napoleon thinking only of himself heartlessly abandoned an army of 100,000 men who had been wholly devoted to him during that bloody and disastrous campaign of four days and fled to Paris. "Remains of an old castle which was fired and burned are still to be seen here," said Mr. King. "A little chapel in the courtyard escaped being burned and by many this is regarded as a strange coincidence. Bullet holes are to be seen in the walls of the old ruins, a part of which farmers use for a dwelling and the other part for a stable. The place is not kept as a great many old ruins are, but very interesting nevertheless for it was here the empire of France was swept away and the military leadership of Europe went to England."

Mr. King says that all Europe is awakening to the tourist crop and some day the battlefield of Waterloo so long neglected will be properly cared for on account of attracting tourists. He said:

"The English have erected here a model monument to the great victory of the Duke of Wellington, commander of the allied army. The Dutch have built a mound with a lion on top of it. France, a monument with an eagle in wounded distress, a hole through its useless wing, and a drooping flag in its clutch. The Prussians have also erected a simple monument.

"Many of the scenes and the prisons where many were tortured and drowned were seen at Antwerp, one of the two ports of entry in Belgium. Antwerp means to cut off the hand and throw it away," said Mr. King.

The Hague was next visited. Here they found the atmosphere quite different, as most of the people could talk English. They saw the palace of peace where the nations of the world meet in accordance with the new adopted by the Hague court of international arbitration.

The Kings party went to Amsterdam in Holland from The Hague and it was in that beautiful country Mr. King found the greatest treat of his trip. The Isle of Marken, who inhabitants and customs have been [illegible] by him. Another interesting place was Volendam on the main land. "Here," said Mr. King, "the having many of the [illegible] of the people on the [illegible] plain to be [illegible] simplicity has been [illegible] with the contact [illegible] the [illegible] different yet [illegible] almost within sight of the [illegible] land. This [illegible] the original feature of [illegible] and German [illegible] neighborhood former [illegible] of their own [illegible] individual [illegible] neighborhood [illegible]. But the quaint and odd costume is rapidly vanishing."

Berlin, the German capital, is the most beautiful city. It has plenty of business activity, too, with magnificent parks, one of which is the great garden. The garden or park has a beautiful drive with fat trees on either side and luxuriant foliage for a background.

"The gardens and palace at Potsdam are a dream, the most beautiful we saw in Europe. One of the historical views is the old windmill which Frederick the Great wanted moved when he built the palace and gardens in which it still today in striking contrast to the great piles of beautiful stone called a palace, an enduring monument to the fearless honesty of of the courts of the day.

Mr. King related the old story of how Frederick II, king of Prussia from 1740 to 1786, sought to buy the windmill when he laid out the great palace and gardens at Potsdam. But the miller refused to sell because his father, father and his father's grandfather's father for generations back had run the old mill and he wanted to continue it operation as a means of living.

"Then you want me to exert my power," shouted King Frederick, "so the story goes, to the poor miller.

"You may do as you like," calmly returned his subject.

And the great monarch brought his full power into play to rob the miller of the old mill but the highest tribunal in the land decided against the ruler who afterward expressed his pleasure because his country had such just courts, and the old mill is still standing apparently in defiance of the elements as it once defied Frederick the Great.

"In the summer palace at Potsdam," Mr. King continued, "we saw the wonderful room fitted up by Frederick the Great for his friend Voltaire. The walls of this room are decorated with monkeys and parrots in bold relief. I believe it was Voltaire who said that if you take the wit of a monkey and the vocal power of a parrot you would have a man."

That Frederick the Great was an exceptional man, full of original ideas and the determination to carry them out, as well as a great general and soldier, is in evidence on every hand even to this day. His original ideas everywhere to be seen. Once he found his pages asleep, according to tradition, so he made them benches so narrow that they could not lie down. The benches are there in the great palace to be viewed by the curious of today. In one of the palaces there is a room of exquisite beauty. Its walls and ceiling are inlaid with mother of pearl and rare stones and shell.

From Potsdam we returned to Berlin by boat over a beautiful lake. It was in Berlin that we got our first real glimpse of the German army. Its fine appearing, of course, but is a well known it is maintained at a great cost. The people are not only heavily taxed but the young men are compelled to serve two years as soldiers just at an age when they should be actively engaged in some business enterprise and the apparent tendency is to cause these young men to lose their ambition for work but as a sort of inducement or reward for long service those who serve twelve years are assured of some public job—a municipal officer, policeman, forester or crossing watchman. This undoubtedly accounts for the fact that so much of the labor is done by the women, such as farming, cleaning streets and sidewalk, shoveling coal and other manual labor American women would not think of doing. Yet with Germany's advantages of technical schools Emperor William's empire takes its place in the foremost ranks as a manufacturing nation. It is scientifically greater still. Any evil effects that might result from the enforced army service or from the cost of maintaining it is effectively counteracted by the government through its superior system of technical education. What is true of Germany is true of all European armies.

Mr. King was pleased with Carlsbad which he described as undoubtedly the most cosmopolitan city in the world, where thousands and thousands from all parts of the world go every year to drink at and bathe in the famous springs where the Poland Jew, the Russian, the Chinese, the American and the Englishman mingle with the citizen of all nations and fall in line to wait and to receive their individual cup from the white aproned maiden who form a human chain at the springs and pass the water to the waiting cup owner.

"In Carlsbad the people eat in the open air," said Mr. King. "There are no flies or bugs to interfere."

Mr. King and his family went to Carlsbad from Dresden, going through picturesque Elbe river valley—picturesque because the hill sides are bejeweled by a myriad of small farms with a variety of crops the colors of which deepened from light to dark green and hammered in the golden yellow of ripening wheat.

At Dresden the little Marion party saw the prison chamber of the man who discovered the superior art of decorated porcelain known as Dresden china. They had often admired this famous Dresden ware and the story of how the discoverer had been imprisoned by the king of Saxony until he worked out the secret of its composition proved interesting. It was the first china made in Europe.

Nuremberg in Bavaria held Mr. King and his family several days to admire its ancient structures and to gasp with horror at the different modes of torture of the Middle Ages, many of the torture cells and instruments of death still being preserved.

Wandering through the crooked streets they heard a story or the story the gray walled and red tiled houses had to tell. They were attracted by the great castle with its old towers and the fortifications which begin from there to engirdle the town, and the churches and chapels, the town hall, the market and the squares with fountains large and small—all these made plain to them that no alteration had existed there whatever might have been the forms of horrible punishment inflicted upon the helpless prisoners of the ancient Nurembergers.

It was here that Durer, the greatest and most German of German masters, was born, also Hans Sachs and P. Vischer, and it is here atmosphere of German art so entirely and exclusively as in no other town, yet comparatively few Americans visit it because it is not easy to reach," Mr. King, in speaking of it said.

"Nuremberg was at one time regarded as the best fortified city in Europe. At one time the Romans brought treasures there for safe keeping. That was back in the twelfth or fourteenth century. It is noted for many things but the torture chambers cause one to shiver. They are preserved in their ancient appearance. The baker who gave short weight bread was put in a cage and soused in the river until almost drowned, and the scolding wife had to wear a hideous mask. There were all kinds of punishment meted out. Here is a model of the Iron Lady."

Mr. King set a small iron affair on the table and opened it. The inside was covered with iron prongs. "An offender was put within the original and when the door was closed the prongs pierced through his eyes and body. The front of it bore the face of a woman and thus received its name. This terrible executioner is still to be seen in Nuremberg. Another form of death was to be pulled to pieces or beheaded. There was no justice. The prisoner never saw the judge. He talked from his dungeon to a guard who spoke through a tube to a second man and a third man told the judge what the prisoner had said."

Mr. King spoke of the beautiful river Pegnitz which flows through the city and its many remarkable bridges. "No fewer than six stone bridges connect the two halves of the town. Just after the river leave the old city it is spanned by two high arches supporting a bridge which dates from 1497.

"It was in Nuremberg that the old music masters lived," said Mr. King. "Among them were Peter Vischer, a blacksmith, and Hans Sachs, a shoe maker. They formed a musical society and the rules they laid down are still used today. To belong to this ancient society one had to have a trade."

Peter Vischer afterward became the renowned sculptor and Hans Sachs proved to be a divinely gifted cobbler, for from the exuberance of his heart he warbled forth the song of the Wittenberg Nightingale and by his original and healthy humor won every German heart. Statuettes of Vischer and Sachs were brought home by Mr. King to be given a place in the stately King mansion.

"We went to Rothenburg from Nuremberg by automobile," Mr. King said in continuing the story of his journey. "Rothenburg is in Bavaria and the ride was sixty miles through forty six towns, hamlets and villages ranging from a dozen to fifty houses. It is an ancient fortified city but not as large as Nuremberg. Its ancient appearance has never been encroached upon by modern improvements. So we see the city practically as it was in the twelfth or fourteenth century. This city like Nuremberg resorted to severe torture of prisoners. There is a high tower still there. From the top of this criminals or prisoners were hurled through the center of a huge knife which were arranged at the bottom. It was fortunate if the victim was killed instantly. Otherwise if badly mutilated he would lie there until death came to relieve his suffering."

Mr. King recalled a bit of history and romance. It was in Rothenburg that Tilly, the sullen general, after battering through the fortified walls, walked to the beautiful Renaissance town hall where the counsellors were in session anxiously awaiting to learn their fate at his hands. General Tilly was exasperated by the long resistance opposed to him and he condemned all the counsellors to be hanged and the town sacked and burned.

History does not record that a fascinating maiden entered the hall but tradition has furnished one to save the city. In the story the gloomy mannered soldier was not an easy mark for the wiles of this charmer who offered him a great bumper of wine and sought to induce him to drink it. He turned to the condemned counsellors however and remarked that if any of them emptied the bumper at one draught he would cancel the death warrant and save the town. What happened? Why the burgomaster did not shrink from the task. Besides he liked wine and he drained the huge mug at one draught.

"The Heroic Draught" is the name of a play founded on this supposed incident and in it the counsellors narrow escape from death is described in a captivating and emotional manner.

Munich was next visited, then Lucerne and Zurich, Switzerland. "In Switzerland we admired the beautiful lakes and the snow capped mountain scenery," said Mr. King, "and we felt a great deal of comfort at being able to travel like we do in the United States. We found the railway accommodations here better than in any other country in Europe. From Switzerland we returned to Germany going to Strasburg to see the great clock there and then we went to Paris. There is one feature about Paris that a tourist can not help but notice and that is that Paris has seen better days. Its imperial splendor is faded. While the public buildings themselves are well preserved the grounds are neglected. What were once the promenades of royalty are no longer kept up in their original splendor.

"The French woman is stylish. Not so with her husband. He seems to be happy when he can spend everything on his wife to make her beautiful and stylish. The French women are very artistic in their dress and taste. That is why they set the fashion.

"We sailed from Cherbourg on the George Washington September 21st and arrived in New York October [illegible]. It was stormy but the ship was so large that it met the mighty swells with little if any discomfort resulting to her passengers."

Mr. King arose from his chair at his first pause stopped dead and smiled broadly. "I can't tell you what a pleasing sensation we felt when we saw old New York," he said. "There was a certain beauty about it that we hadn't seen before. We were in the United States again and we were happy.

"The streets of New York showed the hustling American spirit that was not so apparent in Europe. When we got hold of American money—well it just looked good as I consider American money superior to that of any other country."

Mr. King returns to the United States convinced that Uncle Sam is behind the old world in one thing—the metric system of weights and measures.

"We have a superior monetary system but the metric system of weights and measures in vogue all over Europe except England is far superior to either the American or the English systems. There ought to be a universal metric system of weights and measures."

In conclusion Mr. King declared: "New York looked good to us but Marion looked better and when we arrived home we thought Marion was the best place in the world to live, for after all there is no place like home."

THE CONQUEST OF NORTH POLE

The Big Lead Is Struck by the Explorer.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM ICY GRAVE

When the Ice Breaks Apart Before Party.

Cook and His Companions Find Themselves in the Heart of a Storm—New Land Is Sighted by Them — The Mid-Polar Basin Proves To Be Utterly Destitute of All Life.

Seventh Article.

ON snowshoes and with spread legs I led the way. The sleds with light loads followed. The surface vibrated as we moved along, but the spiked handle of the ice ax did not easily pass through. For about two miles we walked with an easy tread and considerable anxiety, but we had all been on similar ice before and we knew that with a ready line and careful watchfulness there was no great danger. A cold bath, however, in that temperature, forty degrees below, could have had some serious consequences. In two crossings all our supplies were safely landed on the north shores, and from there the lead had a more picturesque effect.

For a time this huge separation in the pack was a mystery to me. At first sight there seemed to be no good reason for its existence. Peary had found a similar break north of Robeson channel. It seemed likely that what we saw was an extension of the same lead following at a distance the general trend of the northernmost land extension.

This is precisely what one finds on a smaller scale wherever two ice packs come together. Here we have the pack of the central polar sea meeting the land ice. The movement of the land pack is intermittent and usually along the coast. The shallows, grounded ice and projecting points interfere with a steady drift. The movement of the central pack is quite constant and almost in every direction.

The tides, the currents and the winds each give momentum to the floating mass. This lead is the breaking line between the two bodies of ice. It widens as the pack separates, narrows or widens with an easterly or westerly drift, according to the pressure of the central pack. Early in the season when the pack is little crevassed and not elastic it is probably wide; later, as the entire sea of ice becomes active, it may disappear or shift to a line nearer the land.

New Ice Stops Drift.

In low temperature new ice forms rapidly, and this offers an obstruction to the drift of the old ice. As the heavy central ice is pressed against the unyielding land pack the small ice is ground up, and even heavy floes are crushed. This reduced mass of small ice is pasted and cemented along the shores of the big lead, leaving a broad band of troublesome surface as a serious barrier to sled travel. It seems quite likely that this lead, or a condition similar to it, extends entirely around the polar sea as a buffer between the land and the middle pack.

With the big lead and its many possibilities for troublesome delay behind, a course was set to reach the eighty-fifth parallel on the ninety-seventh meridian. What little movement was noted on the ice had been easterly, and to allow for this drift we aimed to keep a line slightly west of the pole.

The wind was not a trouble-some factor as we forged along for the first day over this central pack. After a run of eleven hours the pedometer registered twenty-three miles, but we had taken a zigzag course and therefore only placed seventeen miles to our credit.

The night was beautiful. The sun sank into a purple haze, and soon there appeared three suns in prismatic colors, and these soon settled into the frozen sea. During the night a narrow band of orange brightened the northern skies, while the pack surface glowed in magnificent shades of violet and lilac and pale purple blue.

Land Clouds Still Visible.

Satisfactory observations at noon on March 21 gave our position as latitude 83 degrees 21 minutes, longitude 96 degrees 27 minutes. The land clouds of Grant Land were still visible, and a low bank of mist in the west occasionally brightened, offering an outline suggestive of land. This we believed to be Crocker Land, but mist persistently screened the horizon and did not offer an opportunity to study the contour.

Until midday the time was used for observations and a study of the land conditions. The dogs sniffed the air as if scenting game, but after a diligent search one seal blowhole was found and an old bear track, but no alga or other small life was detected in the water of the crevices. At the big lead a few algae were gathered, but here the sea was sterile. The signs of seal and bear, however, were encouraging for a possible food supply. In returning the season would be more advanced, and the life might move northward, thus permitting an extension of the time allowance of our rations.

Though the heat of the sun was barely felt, its rays began to pierce the eye with painful effects. The bright light, being reflected from the spotless surface of the storm driven snows, could not long be endured even by the Eskimos without some protection. The amber colored goggles that we had made at Annootok from the glass of the photographic supplies now proved a priceless discovery. They effectually removed one of the greatest torments to arctic travel.

The darkened or smoky glasses, blue glasses and ordinary automobile goggles had all been tried with indifferent results. They failed for one reason or another, mostly because of an insufficient range of vision or a faulty construction making it impossible to proceed more than a few minutes without removing the accumulated condensation.

Relief In Amber Glasses.

This trouble was entirely eliminated in our goggles. The amber glass screened only the active rays which injure the eye, but did not interfere with the range of vision. Indeed the eye, relieved of the snow glare, was better enabled to see distant objects than through fieldglasses. It is frequently most difficult to detect icy irregularities on cloudy days. The amber glass also dispels this trouble perfectly, enabling the eye to search carefully every nook and crevice through the vague incandescence which blinds the observer in hazy weather. The amber glass therefore reduces not the quantity of light, as do smoky glasses, but the quality. We were not only relieved of the pain and fatigue of snow glare, but the amber color gave a touch of cheer and warmth to our chilled horizon of blues.

So thoroughly were we in love with these goggles that later they were worn while asleep, with the double object of screening the strong light which passes through the eyelids and also to keep the forehead warm.

On this march in the early part of the afternoon the weather proved good and the ice, though newly crevassed, improved as we advanced. The late start spread our day's work close to the chill of midnight, and before we were quite ready to camp there were signs of another gale from the west. Little sooty clouds with ragged edges scurried along at an alarming pace, and beyond a huge smoky bank blackened the pearly glitter.

Suitable camping ice was sought, and in the course of an hour an igloo was built. The structure was built stronger than usual. Double tiers of snow blocks were placed to the windward and a little water was thrown over the top to cement the blocks. The dogs were fastened to the lee of hummocks, and the sleds were securely lashed and fastened to the ice.

We expected a hurricane and had not long to wait to taste of its bitters. Before we were at rest in our bags the wind brushed the snows with a force inconceivable. The air thickened with rushing drift. In a few moments the dogs and sleds were buried under banks of snow and great drifts encircled the igloo. The cemented blocks of our dome withstood the sweep of the blast very well, but many small holes were burrowed through the snow wall, permitting some drift to enter.

Early in the morning, after a rush of but a few hours, the storm ceased as suddenly as it came and left a stillness which was appalling. The dogs soon began to howl desperately, as if attacked by a bear, and we rushed out, seeking guns, but there was no approaching creature.

It was a combined signal of distress. The storm driven snows had buried and bound them in unyielding frost. They had partly uncovered themselves, but by trace and harness they were frozen to hardened masses, so much so that few could rise and stretch, which is a severe torment to dogs after a storm. We freed their traces, beat the cemented snows from their furs with sticks, and their curling tails and pointed noses told of common gratitude.

As we skirmished about for a little stretch ourselves the sun rose over the northern blue, flashing the newly driven snows in warm tones. The temperature during the storm rose to 26 below, but now the thermometer sank rapidly below 40. The west was still smoky, and the weather did not seem quite settled. It was too early to start, so we disrobed again, slipped into the bags and sought a quiet slumber.

A few hours later we were rudely awakened by loud explosive noises. Looking about, nothing unusual was detected about the igloo, and a peep through the eye port gave no cause for the disturbance. It was concluded that the ice was cracking from the sudden change of temperature in quite the usual harmless manner, and we turned over to prolong the bag comforts.

Then there came a series of thundering noises, with which the ice quivered. Ahwelah arose and said that the house was breaking. I turned to rise and sank into a newly formed crevasse, which up to that moment was bridged by snow. A man in a bag is a helpless creature, and with water below and tumbling blocks of snow from above pressing one deeper and deeper the case was far from humorous at a temperature of 48 below.

Still, the boys laughed heartily. Their hands, however, were quickly occupied. Ahwelah grabbed my bag and rolled me over on snow of doubtful security. They then slipped into furs with electric quickness and tossed the things out on safe ice.

In the extreme cold the water froze in sheets about the bag, and when the ice was beaten off the reindeer skin was, to my pleasure, found quite dry. A few moments more of sleep and we might all have found a resting place in the chilling deep. That experience kept us ever watchful for the dangers of the spreading ice in all calms after storms.

The ice about was much disturbed, and numerous black lines of water opened on every side, from which oozed jets of frosty steam. The great difference between the temperature of the sea and that of the air made a contrast of 76 degrees, and the open spots of ice water appeared to be boiling.

Anxious to move along away from the troubled angle of ice, the usual breakfast was simplified. Melting some snow, we poured down the icy liquid as an eye opener and then began at the half pound bowlder of pemmican, but with cold fingers, blue lips and no possible shelter the stuff was unusually hard.

To warm up the sleds were prepared, and under the lash the dogs jumped into harness with a bound. The pemmican, somewhat reduced with the ax was ground under the molars as we went along. The teeth were thus kept from chattering, and the stomach was filled with durable fuel.

As we advanced the ice improved to some extent, and with a little search a safe crossing was found over all of the new crevices, though a strong westerly wind carried a piercing cold. Good progress was made, but we were not allowed to forget at any time that we were invading the forbidden domains of polar environment.

The Bitter Cold.

In starting before the end of the winter night and camping on the open ice fields in the long northward march we had first accustomed our eyes to a frigid darkness and then to a perpetual glitter with shivers. This proved to be the coldest season of the year. We should have been hardened to all kinds of arctic torment, but man only gains that advantage when the pulse ceases to beat.

Far from land, far from other life, there was nothing to arouse a warming spirit. Along the land there had been calms and gales and an inspiring contrast, even in the dark days and nights, but here the frigid world was felt at its worst. The wind, which came persistently from the west—now strong, now feeble, but always sharp—inflicted a pain to which we never became accustomed.

The kind of torture not felt in this cold and humid air of an arctic pack was a picturesque mask of ice about the face. Every bit of exhaled moisture condensed and froze either to the facial hair or to the line of fox tails about the hood. It made a comical caricature of us.

The frequent turns in this course brought both sides to the wind and arranged a line of icicles from every hair offering a convenient nucleus. These lines of crystal offered a pleasing dash of light and color as we looked at each other, but they did not afford much amusement to the individual exhibiting them. Such hairs as had not been pulled from the lips and the chin were first weighted, and then the wind carried the breath to the long hair with which we protected our heads and left a mass of dangling frost.

An Icy Coating.

Accumulated moisture from the eyes coated the eyelashes and brows. The humidity escaping about the forehead left a crescent of snow above, while that escaping under the chin, combined with falling breath, made a semicircle of ice. The most uncomfortable icicles, however, were those that had formed on the coarse hair within the nostrils. It is to free the face of this kind of decoration that the Eskimos pull the facial hair out by the roots; hence the real poverty of mustaches and beards.

Eighth Article.

DURING two days of chilly bluster the sleds were forced along with encouraging results, and on the evening of March 26, with a pedometer and other method of dead reckoning for position, we were placed at latitude 84 degrees 33 minutes. The western horizon remained persistently undisturbed. A brisk storm, it seemed, was gathering, but it was a long time in coming eastward. On the evening of the 26th we prepared for the blast and built the igloo stronger than usual, hoping that the horizon would be cleared by a good blow on the morrow and afford us a day of rest. The long, steady marches, without time for recuperation, had begun to check our enthusiasm.

In the daily monotony of hardship we had learned to appreciate more and more the joy of the sleeping bag. It was the only animal comfort which afforded a relief to our life of frigids, and with it we tried to force upon the weary body in the long marches a pleasing anticipation.

In the evening, after the blocks of snow walled a dome in which we could breathe quiet air, the blue flame lamp sang the notes of gastronomical delights. A heaven given drink of ice water was first indulged in to quench the chronic thirst, and then the process of distobing began, one at a time, for there was not room for all to act at once.

Tea In an Hour.

The fur stuffed boots were pulled, and the bearskin pants were stripped. Then half of the body was quickly pushed into the bag. A brick of pemmican was next taken out, and the teeth were set to the grind of this bonelike substance. The appetite was always large, but a half pound of cold withered heel and tallow changes a hungry man's thoughts effectually.

The tea, an hour in making, was now ready, and we rose on elbows to take it. Under the influence of the warm drink the fur coat with its mask of ice was removed. Next the shirt, with its ring of ice about the waist, comes off, giving the last sense of shivers. Pushing farther into the bag, the hood was pulled over the face, and we were lost to the world of ice.

The warm sense of mental and physical pleasure which follows is an interesting study. The movement of others, the sting of the air, the noise of torturing winds, the blinding rays of a heatless sun, the pains of driving snows and all the bitter elements were absent. The mind, freed of the agitation of frost, wandered to home and better times under these peculiar circumstances; there comes a pleasing sense with the touch of one's own warm skin, while the companionship of the arms and legs, freed of their cumbersome furs, makes a new discovery in the art of getting next to oneself.

In the Heart of a Storm.

On March 27 it blew a half gale at night, but at noon on the following day the wind eased. The bright sun and rising temperature were too tempting to remain quiescent, and, though the west was still darkened by threatening clouds, the dogs were put to the sleds and off they went among the wind swept hummocks. We had not gone many miles before the first rush of a storm struck us.

Throwing ourselves over the sleds, we waited the passing of the icy blast.

There was no suitable snow near to begin the erection of a shelter, but a few miles northward was a promising area for camp, and to this we hoped to take ourselves after a few moments' rest. The squall soon spent its force, and in the wind which followed good progress was made without suffering severely. The temperature was 11 degrees below zero F. and the barometer 29.05.

Once in moving order, the drivers required very little encouragement to prolong the effort to a fair day's march in spite of the weather. As the sun settled in the western gloom the wind increased its fury and forced us into camp. Before the gloom was hushed a steady, rasping wind brushed the hummocks and piled up the snow in large dunes like the sands of home shores.

The snow house was not cemented with water. The tone of the wind did not seem to indicate danger, and, furthermore, we were beginning to realize the great need of fuel economy. We therefore did not deem it prudent to use oil for the fire to melt snow, except to quench thirst.

Not particularly anxious about the outcome of the storm and with senses blunted by overwork and benumbed with cold, we sought the comfort of the bags.

Buried Under the Snow.

Awakened in the course of a few hours by drifts of snow about our feet, it was noted that the wind had burrowed holes in the weak spots through the snow wall. Still, we were bound not to be cheated out of a few hours' sleep, and with one eye open we turned over. Later I was awakened by falling snow blocks.

Forcing my head out of the ice incased hood, I saw that the dome had been swept away and that we were being buried under a dangerous weight of snow. In some way I had tossed about sufficiently during sleep to keep detected.

on top of the accumulating drift, but my companions were out of sight and did not respond to a loud call.

After a little search a blowhole was located, and in response to another call came Eskimo shouts. Violent efforts were made to free their bags, but the snow settled on them tighter with each tussle.

I was surprised a few moments later as I was digging their breathing place open to feel them burrowing through the snow. They had entered the bag without undressing and half emerged with shirt and pants on, but without feet.

After a little more digging their boots were uncovered, and then, with protected feet, the bag was freed and placed on the side of the igloo. Into it the boys crept in full dress, except coats. I rolled out to their side in my bag.

Move on Refreshed.

The air came in hissing spouts, like jets of steam from an engine, but soon after noon of the 29th the ice under our heads brightened. It became possible to breathe without being choked with floating crystals, and as the ice about the facial furs was broken a little blue was detected in the west.

The dogs were freed of snow entanglements and fed, and a shelter was made in which to melt snow and make tea. A double ration was eaten, and then the sleds began to move again.

Soon the sun burst through the separating clouds and raised icy spires in towers of glitter. The wind then ceased entirely, and a scene of crystal glory was laid over the storm swept fields. With full stomachs, fair weather and a much needed rest, we moved with inspirations anew. Indeed, we felt refreshed as one does after a cold bath.

The pack had been much disturbed, and considerable time and distance were lost in seeking a workable line of travel. Camping at midnight, we had only made nine miles for a day's effort.

Awakening in time for observations on the morning of the 30th, the weather was found beautifully clear. The fog, which had persistently screened the west, had vanished, and land was discovered at some distance west, extending parallel to the line of march. The observations placed us at latitude 84 degrees 50 minutes, longitude 95 degrees 36 minutes.

A Long Coast Line.

In the occasional clearing spells for several days we had seen sharply defined land clouds drifting over a low band of pearly fog, and we had expected to see land when this veil lifted. We had, however, not anticipated to see so long a line of coast. The land as we saw it gave the impression of being two islands, but our observations were insufficient to warrant such an assertion. They may be islands; they may be a part of a larger land extending far to the west. What was seen of the most southerly coast extends from 83 degrees 29 minutes to 83 degrees 51 minutes, close to the one hundred and second meridian.

This land has an irregular mountainous sky line, is perhaps eighteen hundred feet high and resembles in its upper reaches the highlands of Heiberg island. The lower shore line was at no time visible.

From 81 degrees 23 minutes, extending to 85 degrees 11 minutes, close to the one hundred and second meridian, the coast is quite straight. Its upper surface is flat and mostly ice capped, rising in steep cliffs to about twelve hundred feet. The lower surface was so indistinctly seen that we were unable to detect glacial streams or ice walls. Both lands were hopelessly buried under accumulated snows.

We were eager to set foot on the newly discovered coast, for we believed then, as proved by later experience, that these were the earth's northernmost rocks, but the pressing need for rapid advances in the aim of our main mission did not permit of detours. Resolutions were re-enforced and energy was harbored to press onward for the pole in an air line.

Fair Marches Made.

Every observation, however, indicated an easterly drift, and a westerly course must be continuously forced to counterbalance the movement. A curtain was drawn over the land in the afternoon of March 31, and we saw no more of it. Day after day we now pushed along in desperate northward efforts. Strong winds and fractured, irregular ice increased the difficulties. Progress was slow.

In one way or other we managed to gain a fair march between storms during each twenty-four hours. In an occasional spell of stillness mirages spread screens of fantasy out for our entertainment. Curious cliffs, odd shaped mountains and inverted ice walls were displayed in attractive colors. Discoveries were made often, but with clearer horizon the deception was detected.

On April 3 the barometer remained steady and the thermometer sank. The weather became settled and clear. The pack became a more permanent glitter of color and joy. At noon there was now a dazzling light, while the sun at midnight sank for but a few moments under a persistent northerly haze, leaving the frosted blues bathed in noonday splendor.

In these days we made long marches. The ice steadily improved. Fields became larger and thicker, the pressure lines less frequent and less troublesome. Nothing changed materially. The horizon moved; our footing was seemingly a solid crust of ice, but it shifted eastward. All was in motion. Often we were too tired to build snow houses, and in sheer exhaustion we bivouacked in the lee of hummocks. Here the overworked body called for sleep, but the mind refused to close the eye.

In a Lifeless World.

There was a weird attraction in the anomaly of our surroundings which aroused the spirits. We had passed beyond the range of all life. For many days we had not seen a suggestion of animated nature. There were no longer footprints to indicate other life; no breath spouts escaped from the frosted bosom of the sea.

Even the sea algae of the surface waters were no longer detected. We were alone, all alone, in a lifeless world. We had come to this mental blank in slow but progressive stages. As we sailed from the barren areas of the fisher folk along the outposts of civilization the complex luxury of the metropolis was lost and the brain called for food.

Beyond, in the half savage wilderness of Danish Greenland, there was the dawn of a new life of primitive delight. Still farther along, in the ultima Thule of the aborigines, the sun rose over the days of prehistoric joys. Advancing beyond the haunts of man, we reached the noonday splendor of thought in times before man's creation.

Now, as we pushed beyond the habitat of all creatures, ever onward, into the sterile wastes, the sun sets. Beyond were night and hopelessness. With eager eyes we searched the dusky plains of frost, but there was no speck of life to grace the purple run of death.

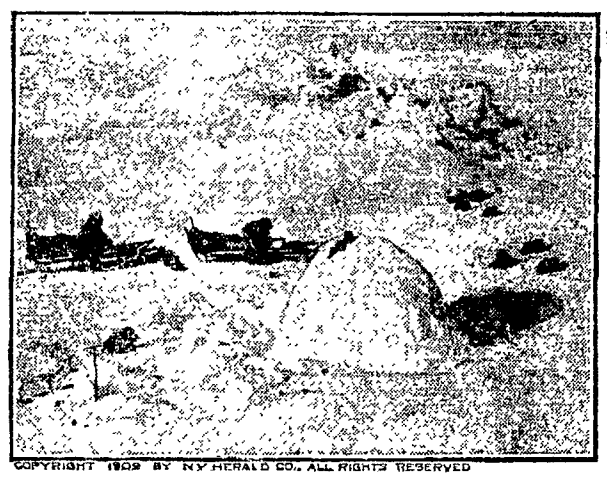

In this mid-polar basin the ice does not readily escape and disentangle. It is probably in motion at all times of the year, and in the readjustment of the fields following motion and expansion there are open spaces of water, and these during most months are quickly sheeted with new ice.

Measuring the Ice.

In these troubled areas we were given frequent opportunities to measure ice thickness, and from our observations we have come to the conclusion that the ice during one year does not freeze to a depth of more than about ten feet. But much of the ice of the central pack reaches a depth of from twenty to twenty-five feet, and occasionally we crossed fields fifty feet thick. These invariably showed signs of many years of surface upbuilding.

It is very difficult to surmise the amount of submerged freezing after the first year, but the very uniform thickness of the antarctic sea ice leads to the suggestion that a limit is reached in the second year, when the ice, with its cover of snow, is so thick that very little is added afterward from below.

Increase in size after that is probably in the main the result of addition to the superstructure. Frequent falls of snow, combined with the alternate melting and freezing of summer and a process similar to the upbuilding of glacial ice, are mainly responsible for the growth in thickness. The very heavy, undulating fields which give character to the mid-polar ice and escape along the east and west coasts of Greenland are therefore mostly augmented from the surface.

Friends Call at Office and Extend Congratulations

County Auditor Charles I Allen began his second term of office Monday by working hard at his desk all day It was not generally known that the third Monday in October marked the second term of this popular county official but a number of his friends called and extended their hearty congratulations

DENMAN'S RULING WORRIES OFFICIALS

The Offices That Fall Short in Receipts Must Suffer

NO PROVISIONS IN LAW FOR SALARIES

If an Office Does Not Take in Enough To Meet the Expenses the Officer Must Stand the Shortage—An Amendment to the Law Will Be Sought—Expenses Reduced

Marion county officials who fail to take in enough money to pay their salaries this year are worried over the ruling of Attorney General T C Denman that the county commissioners will not be permitted to appropriate money from the county funds to cover the shortages in those offices where the receipts have been less than the expenses

A test by a taxpayers suit may be brought to settle the tee Jaw tangle with the hope that on account of the conflicting clause in the statutes regulating the salaries of county officials the courts will allow the commissioners to make up the deficiencies However the officials are hopeful that the legislature will amend the law next January and that a test suit will not be necessary

Inferences made in certain cases that Marion county officials have incurred additional expenses by an increase in the working forces of their offices are unjust Investigation on the part of any one sufficiently interested will show that County Auditor Charles I Allen retains the same number of employes as in former years and could use more men in his department No new additions are found in the offices of Sheriff John G Stark Probate Judge W S Spencer Treasurer William C Wotring or Recorder Edward I Tittlebaugh while Clerk W W Klinefelter has employed a woman instead of a man as deputy to cut down the expenses of his office

The salary law has never been popular with Marion county officials who declare that it does not place all county officials on a salary paying basis and they cite the coroners office as an example The coroner still draws fees

The failure of the clerk and the sheriff to collect the fees they are entitled to lies in the operation of the present system If a deposit were required from all litigants sufficient to cover the costs in all civil actions and then compel the parties to pay all costs as each case progresses this would be avoided As it now stands no money is realized until the cases come on hearing which is often from one and a half to two years after an action is begun all of which time the clerk and sheriff must wait for their fees

Following the practice now in vogue in the beginning of divorce proceedings people without money could be made to file poverty affidavits so as not to be barred from their constitutional rights and thus the clerk and the sheriff would be assured of sufficient fees to pay their salaries it is said Such an amendment to the salary law may be urged

BALLOONS ARE HEARD FROM BY YOUTHS

The Balloons Are Sent Up at Time of the Fair

The sight of a quartet of toy balloons going up at the Marion county fair and sailing out of sight in the clouds attracted considerable attention but it was never thought that the balloons would ever be heard from There was much speculation as to how long they would stay in the air and how far they would travel That the problem might be solved to some extent four local boys attached their names to cards and fastened the cards to the balloons which they cut loose One of the balloons was found in South Bend Indiana recently while a second balloon with the names of the boys was found in a tree near Mid Ohio by Miss Kohle Inskeep

which is new this year we started with the determination to practice the same policy that has been in effect in our other departments for so many years, that is, to buy only such wares as will give you years of satisfactory service and mark them at prices that are an agreeable surprise to judges of style, quality and values in these goods

In Haviland China we show several beautiful 1909 designs in White and Gold, conventional and fancy decorations; Grindley's and Johnson Brothers' semi-porcelains in white and gilt, blue clover, silver grey and fancy decorations In German china we show just two exquisite designs one a daintily decorated Princess and the other a white and gold, both of which for perfect lines and finish would pass for Haviland.

All of these designs are in open stock so that you can buy in full sets or such pieces as you may want now and add to from time to time as your pleasure or purse may dictate.

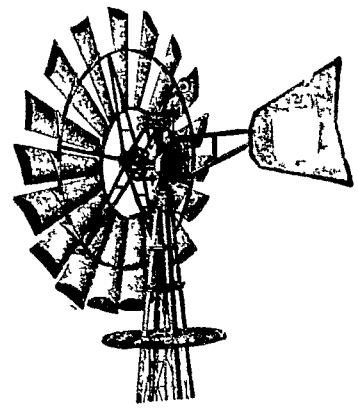

In Habsburg China we show only two designs which are special at $15 for a set of 88 pieces. In domestics we show Knowles Taylor and Knowles first quality (no thirds) at $11 to $15 per set.

REACHES THIRD OF A MILLION

Do Forgeries on Framingham Already Discovered

THAT MAY BE FAR FROM AMOUNT

Of the Notes Outstanding Against the City

Town Treasurer Wishes to Be Obliging and Is Said to Have Been Made the Tool of Schemers—A Prominent Young Woman Figures in Case—Wife of Treasurer Lombard Stands by Him

Framingham Mass Oct 20—"God only knows how many forgeries have been committed on notes against this town since Treasurer Lombard first obliged a friend We know now of $ 25 000 The amount may reach three quarters of a million When this tangled affair is unraveled, I fear it will startle the whole country"

This prophesy with the added information that many of the forged notes against Framingham on which former Town Treasurer John B Lombard and C S Cumming and L A Meade, of the American Bank ing company are under arrest have been sold throughout the West was made here today by one of the town's highest officials

That in the frauds already uncovered as well as those still to develop John Lombard the treasurer of Framingham was but a tool is the general opinion of the officials here and everything today seems to indicate that the bank looting was the work of a gang of unscrupulous men who simply used Lombard as the means to carry it out It is likely that further arrests will be made possibly before night

A Remarkable Development

One of today's most remarkable developments in the swindle is the evidence coming to light that a supposedly wealthy young woman of Framingham is either concerned in the frauds or has been a sharer in the profits of the swindlers This woman is said to have been given jewels automobiles and such luxuries for several years by one of the men whose name has been concerned in the forgeries and the district attorney is considering the wisdom of action to recover from her some of the plunder

This woman who has been a figure on the boulevards near here in her high powered car has retired into seclusion in her home since the note forgeries became known Visitors are told she is ill and can not be seen

In his hour of trouble the wife of Lombard is standing by him loyally When the treasurer was placed under $20 000 bonds after arraignment at his bedside his wife at once went on papers for $10 000 practically the whole of her private fortune

Mr Lombard has been only a tool in the hands of bad men his wife said He was kind and his kindness was abused I will stand by him to my last hour

Claim That It Is Infringement on Their Patents

New York Oct 20—Through Williamson and Smith attorneys the Wright brothers today applied to the United States court for an injunction damages and the right to destroy a French aeroplane which is now at Ampere New Jersey

The machine which is a duplicate of the one in which Bleriot crossed the English channel was brought to this city by Ralph Saulnier who planned to make a series of exhibition flights in the United States

SHE'S BOMBARDED WITH QUESTIONS

When She Lands from Steamer at New York

Says Hardest Thing to Do Is Cause Would Be Not to Be Doing Anything—Describes Political Conditions in England Which Make Militant Methods Necessary—Finds Are to Be Accomplished

New York Oct 21 When the Oceanic docked there was no brass band on the pier to play Hail to the Chief as Mrs Emmeline Pankhurst walked down the gangplank neither did a flagdraped tug go down the bay to meet the noted suffragette There was of course some cheering but it all came from the throats of about 20 suffragettes

Hundreds of them had planned to go down to welcome the English leader but the customs officials were mean enough to limit the number of passes for the pier Those present did the best they could in the way of shouting and waving green white and purple banners but they all looked as if they realized it was a pretty small demonstration to put up

As for Mrs Pankhurst herself she was evidently afraid that there would be more Yankee enthusiasm than her nerves could stand for she was not in sight at all when the gangplank was lowered and practically all the passengers of the Oceanic were wandering around the pier looking for their baggage before the yellow flag waver got so much as a glimpse of her

Do you think the American women are going to get the vote before you do chorused several voices I really am not in a position to express an opinion on that subject was the reply I don't know anything about American politics but I am sure that if you do get it before we do you will have to get it quickly for we expect to get it before the liberal party goes out of power if they stay in their natural length of time—two years longer It is impossible for you to understand our so called militancy unless you know something of English politics No reform is attained except by bringing pressure to bear on the government and to do this we must arouse the voters You can't go to a workingman and ask him to vote contrary to the principles he has held for years just because you want him to Hundreds of workingmen however have been converted to our cause by the women going to prison Every sensational move that we make is designed to arouse the sympathy of the voters against the government We go to every by election and try to defeat the government candidate in order to make the government see that they are losing ground with the voters That is the only thing that can really influence the ministry

Do you think there will be any bloodshed in this struggle you are waging against the liberals? demanded a woman who had not spoken before I hope not said the leader indifferently There are however many women who are ready to give their lives for the cause if necessary

Washington Oct 21—Death came suddenly to Benjamin F Barnes postmaster of Washington soon after dining at the home of his father in law Jacob Fleh

It was while he was assistant private secretary to President Roosevelt that Mr Barnes came into considerable prominence in connection with the White House incident involving the arrest of Mrs Minor Morris a member of a prominent Iowa family who had resided in Washington for many years Mrs Morris had insisted on seeing President Roosevelt and was told by Mr Barnes that she would first be obliged to tell her business to him Mrs Morris declared that she intended to remain at the executive offices until she obtained a personal interview with Mr Roosevelt In the controversy which grew out of her arrest it was alleged that Mr Barnes gave the order that she be taken into custody When two men attempted to remove Mrs Morris there was a struggle and the screaming woman was half carried and half dragged from the executive office until at the west side of the White House to the treasury department an officer of the [illegible] a [illegible] of more than a city block

Much newspaper space was given to the incident and there was considerable criticism of the methods employed in taking Mrs Morris from the executive offices Mrs Morris was released without trial Subsequently when Mr Barnes was nominated to the office of postmaster in Washington the confirmation of the nomination was fought bitterly in the senate on the ground that he had been responsible for the illegal and [illegible] Mrs Morris Senator Tillman made the occasion to make a bitter assault on President Roosevelt [illegible] holding up the nomination for a long time [illegible] President Roosevelt came to Mr Barnes' defense with statements to show that the arrest of Mrs Morris had been justified

UNCLE JOE HITS AT HIS ENEMIES

Emphatically Denies Any Deal with Tammany

THE INSURGENTS ARE HIS TARGETS

The Speaker Gives Them Some Hard Raps

Asks Immense Audience If Seven Senators and Twenty Representatives Are the Republican Party—Asks His Hearers to Gaze on 'Belzebub' and the "Czar"—Bryan Votes One Way, Talks Another

Elgin Ill Oct 20—Before an audience that packed the opera house Speaker Joseph Cannon poured hot shot into the ranks of the insurgents

Standing on tiptoe with his hands straight up and that famous left fore finger wigwagging eloquently Mr Cannon dipped into Lafollette and Cummins He declared that the time had come for the people of the United States to decide whether seven insurgent senators who called themselves Republicans and 20 members of the house constitute the Republican party of this country

Mr Cannon denounced the charge of a deal with Tammany as a false hood He roasted the metropolitan newspapers that assail partisanship as unfair criticism falsehood and denunciation He gave what easily could be construed as Cannon's reason for removing Representative Fowler from the banking and currency committee and which led to the bitter denunciation of Mr Cannon by Fowler He told his audience that Mr Fowler tried to block the will of the majority and that the majority had to put Mr Fowler to one side

Launches Into Satire

When Uncle Joe was not rising in all his might and in the characteristic Cannonesque style of fervid oratory to denounce the attacks on himself and congress he launched into satire fables and biting sarcasm hurled at the insurgents Mr Bryan and others who have termed him a czar

My God can all this be true? shouted Uncle Joe with a smile that got the audience as he finished the indictment against him Holding back the lapels of his coat standing straight as a pine needle and throwing his head back he said with dramatic fervor Behold Mr Cannon the Belzebub of congress Gaze on this noble manly form—me Belzebub me the czar

Mr Cannon pulled back the curtain of congress reviewed his more than a score of years in congress gave his direct to some of his critics and declared that there had been no time in all the history of congress when a majority could not change the program or depose a speaker

Mr Cannon reviewed Speaker Reed's career and told how the Democrats got control of the next congress and how they then after denouncing Reed as a tyrant re enacted the Reed rules in toto and did it again in the next congress that the controlled

And my friend William J Bryan of Nebraska voted for those same rules shouted Uncle Joe He did not say anything about the czar business then or for many years He did not mention the czar business in 1896 in 1900 or in 1904 but he waited until he thought everybody had forgotten about his vote for the czar rules and then in the Denver platform said that the congress of the United States had ceased to be a deliberative body and was the tool of this Belzebub Cannon

CONSCIENCE MONEY IS PAID BY TWO PEOPLE

Man Pays for a Ride Taken Over the Big Four.

"What's the fare from Wooster to Massillon?" asked a well-dressed stranger of Big Four Agent E. L. Payne, at Mt. Gilead, last week. The agent gave him the amount of the fare on the basis of two cents a mile.

"No," replied the stranger, "when I 'beat' my way the railroad was operating under the rate of three cents a mile. I want to pay the rate in full."

The conscience-stricken man refused to compromise with his moral sense of right and confided to the agent that many years ago he stole a ride over the route mentioned. Since that time he said he had been converted and wanted to square accounts with the road. Agent Payne informed him that he should send the amount to the general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania at Pittsburg. He declined to give his name.

Declaring that while H. S. Mooney was in business at Mt. Gilead and that she had taken a five-cent handkerchief from the store, an act which she feared might keep her out of heaven, an unknown woman sent him five cents in stamps recently. Mr Mooney now resides in Galion.

ROOSEVELT IN ROBUST HEALTH

Others of His Party Show Effect of Fevers.

Naivasha, Oct. 20.—Colonel Roosevelt and his "comrades in arms," reassembled here today after having been divided almost continually since the incursion into the Kenia country. The colonel and Guide Cunningham arrived from Nairobi at 11:30, Major Heller and Dr. Mearns having preceded them a few hours, coming from Kenia province

Mr. Roosevelt was the most robust member of the party, as all the others showed the effects of slight fevers that were contracted in the Kenia province The colonel declared that he had not felt the least indisposed during the strenuous days in the mountainous country.

The party will likely engage in a few days of hunting on Lake Naivasha, the scene of some of the colonel's earlier triumphs. Dr. Mearns holds the record of the party for mountain climbing. He tried to scale the peak of Mount Kenia but had to stop at a height of 15,000 feet Heller made a 10,000-foot ascent and gave it up. Colonel Roosevelt contented himself by remaining in the foothills.

SLUMBERS OF BOSS RUDELY DISTURBED

H. W. Mann Quarters Force in a "Haunted House."

FINDS HIS SHOTGUN A GOOD COMPANION

Mann Does Not Believe in Ghosts, but He Has His Skepticism Badly Shaken by His Experience in House in Which People Refuse To Live. The Story.

An old house, said to be haunted, has been the scene of some lively capers the past week, near Morral.

When H. W. Mann secured the contract for building the Everett road he was unable to obtain accommodations at nearby farm houses for his workmen. The only thing left for him to do was to provide quarters for his men in the old deserted house, which has been allowed to fall into decay because no family would live in it through fear of ghostly disturbance.

"What do we care for ghosts," said the workmen in chorus when Mr. Mann told them that they would have to sleep and eat in the old house. A cook, who, by the way, is white, was speedily secured and the men—about a dozen—took up quarters in the supposed haunted house.

The first night everything was peaceful enough, not a ghostly sound being heard.

"This house ain't hanted, but we'll hant her," said one of the workmen to several of the others, "and we'll have some fun with the boss."

Old tin cans and kettles were strung up in the attic so that when a rope was pulled the din would be terrific. It was arranged that one man should pull the rope the first night and the other fellows should pretend they were frightened. All were "wise" but the boss.

Mr. Mann does not believe in ghosts, but he admits that the boys "had him a-going," and for several nights he slept with his shotgun at his side.

SOCIETY WOMAN OF FRAMINGHAM

At the Head of a Gang of Swindlers

WHICH BLEEDS THE TOWN TEN YEARS

Biggest Sensation in Massachusetts in Many Years.

Citizens of Framingham Ridicule the Plea of the Deposed Town Treasurer That All His Difficulties Come from Issuing a Spurious Note for a Friend—Claim That He Is One of the Gang.

Framingham, Mass., Oct. 21.—That a handsome society woman of this town, with a penchant for dabbling in stocks, was the center of a gang of grafters whose steady bleeding of this town for years has only been exposed in the $300,000 scandal, is the latest development in the biggest municipal sensation Massachusetts has known in years.

Besides the forged notes, for the utterances of which C. S. Cummings and E. A. Meade, of the American Banking company, of Boston, are under heavy bail, it developed today that for more than ten years, all premiums on town notes have been appropriated by somebody other than the town and that thousands of dollars have thus been lost to the municipality.

Investigation into Framingham's tangled webs of finance is said to show that those on the inside knew positively at least, as early as last January, that Lombard's methods were open to criticism and the suspicion is growing that, as the price of silence, at least some of these shared in the plunder.

Just what role the woman whose name is being mentioned, played in the fleecing of the town is not fully known. It is known that she has dabbled in stocks for years, and is well known among the brokers of State street in Boston. It is conjectured that through her the gains from fraudulent notes issued against the town have been used by the gang of beneficiaries to play the market. That her efforts have probably netted the gang big money is suspected by her frequent boasts that when she was in the market it was always on the winning side.

Citizens of Framingham today ridicule the plea by the deposed town treasurer, Lombard, that all his difficulties came from issuing a spurious note to aid a friend and declare his years of irregular methods when fully probed, will show him to have been one of a gang which have made thousands on thousands by the use of the town's credit to get their capital.

TWO MEN WHO ARE MENTIONED FOR AMBASSADORSHIP TO CHINA

Washington, Oct. 20.—The fact that Charles E. Magoon, former governor of Cuba, cut short his vacation in Europe and came hurriedly to the capital gave rise to the report that he was to be appointed minister to China Stuyvesant Fish, the New York financier, also is mentioned for the place made vacant by the removal of Charles R. Crane. Both Fish and Magoon have denied being asked to take the place, and Mr. Fish's friends do not believe he would accept it. Mr. Magoon says he will remain here until November 1 and will then visit Ambassador Thompson at the City of Mexico.

Judging by Mr Taft's reference to the Oklahoma constitution we take it that he is not an admirer of freaks.

There is no occasion for the admirers of Dr Wu to become worried The spirits to which he has taken are not the kind sold in the local blind tigers

Judging by the way in which Peary took a shoo and Ah-pe-lah went over that map provided by Commander Peary we are almost forced to assume that they have taken courses in geography from some correspondence school

Commander Peary is certain that Dr Cook did not carry enough pemmican with him to feed himself, his two Eskimo companions and their twenty dogs on the trip to the pole and return From what we have read we can't help but feel that a very little pemmican would go a long way It would with the average man, at least

Professor Jacoby says that there can be no other trustworthy proofs of discovery of the North pole than scientific records and then says scientific records are not to be trusted because a capable man could make them anywhere There! That's enough for us Let Cook and Peary take the pesky pole split it into fence posts and construct a forty-foot ring then fight it out with bare fists Nobody cares very much anyway

Henceforth Governor Harmon will figure on Texas as properly annexed to his presidential boomlet But he needs Nebraska before growing confident

That man Dr Cook can play a great game of poker we'll wager That is if poker is largely the game of nerve that tradition and literature have conveyed to us And we still like the doctor If he is a fraud he is such a consummate one that he is worth knowing

To preserve order in school Superintendent Taft was bound to stand behind Teacher Knox in the matter of the expulsion of Pupil Crane, but there's a sort of an impression out that Teacher Knox has been tipped off not to let it occur again

The French now hold the aeroplane record for height but they hold it with an American machine

It is said that when Mr Taft travels the Pullman porters never insist upon making up the upper berth.

This anti-Cannon talk may some day crystallize into a raid on the speaker by the suffragettes and then the troubles of the gentleman from the Danville Illinois district will begin in earnest

The idea of the meat packers appears to be that since they have to pay out their good money for tuberculosis beef they should be allowed to sell it and that the people have no right to complain It's that kind of talk which increases our respect for the pure food laws

Having forced benzoate of soda down our throats the packers now propose to continue their campaign against Dr Wiley and have the bars erected under the pure food laws against borax, salicylic acid and something like a hundred preservatives—which they hold "absolutely harmless," but which are powerful enough to embalm their canned goods—thrown down

KAISER PROPOSES TO OUTDO ROOSEVELT

Will Act as Godfather to Every Eighth Child Born in Germany

Berlin Oct 21—A circular issued today by the minister of the interior shows that the Kaiser is determined to outdo President Roosevelt in his war against race suicide Alarmed because the last census showed that the German birth rate had fallen off slightly the Kaiser has decided to intervene and the circular issued today declares that Emperor William will act as godfather to the eighth child born in any family

The circular is supplementary to instructions empowering the local authorities of every municipality to pay needy parents $1 for the eighth child born to them

Germany's great birth rate which for the last ten years has averaged a million babies a year is the foundation of her power in Europe since every male baby means a future German soldier

The last census showed the population of the German empire in Europe to be 60,641,278 and it is hoped within the next thirty years to raise this figure to 100,000,000

In order to carry out the project it will be necessary to get the co-operation of Mexico and the memorial began with the suggestion that diplomatic negotiations be begun at once to interest Mexico in the plan

A jury was sworn at 8:45 o'clock. At 9:25 Rizor had been tried, convicted and sentenced. Judge Babst ordered that he pay the complainant $350 for the support of the child and be committed to jail until this amount was paid. Rizor, who was sullen and stubborn, said he would go to jail. The damage suit of George Blum against Charles W. Fairbanks, which was taken to the common pleas court on appeal from the court of Justice C. H. Conley, has been settled. THE SCHULTZ HOME SCENE OF GATHERING

Miss Hazel Schultz Is Hostess to a Company.

The Schultz home in Morral was the scene of one of the most pleasant gatherings of the season Tuesday evening, when Miss Hazel Schultz entertained a merry party of young people. Miss Schultz had invited the members of the G. B. club to partake of the hospitality of her home and without the knowledge of the young women, had invited a number of young men to join in the evening's merriment.

The young women were considerably surprised when they arrived at the Schultz home and found the young men on hand. Their presence only added to the pleasures of the evening and a most enjoyable time was passed with games and vocal and instrumental music.

The hostess later in the evening invited her guests to the dining-room where a sumptuous dinner was served.

Those enjoying the hospitality of the Schultz home were Misses Gertrude Brewer, of Marion; Mildred Washburn, Marie and Roma Welsh, Beaulah and Hazel Cottrell, Messrs. Barney Martin, of Little Sandusky; Mr. White, Bryant Scheckler, George and Dwight Mahaffey, Grover Hite, Abner Busler and Carl Ritter.

CHARLES HOLE GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Is Arraigned in Court To Answer Charge.

HE MUST PAY MONEY TO EXPRESS COMPANY

All Costs of Prosecution Must Also Be Paid by Hole—The Story of the Case of Hole, Who Is Brought Back to Marion at Great Expense Recently.

Charles H. Hole, when rearraigned before Judge Babst at 1 o'clock Wednesday, changed his plea of not guilty and was given an indeterminate sentence to the state reformatory, but the sentence was suspended.

Hole, to retain his liberty, must make full restitution to Wells, Fargo & Company's express, pay all the costs of prosecution and be under the charge of a probation officer for a year.

At the time the affidavit was filed against Hole, who was a transfer agent for the express company, it was charged that he had absconded with $1,000 of the company's money. A year later he was arrested at Seattle, Washington, shortly after he had married under the name of Lowe, and brought here by Sheriff John G. Stark, who spent $500 to make the trip to Seattle and back. Sheriff Stark was in Seattle several days before he was able to get his man, who had obtained his liberty through habeas corpus, and then he had to kidnap him in an automobile, making a wild drive at night to get out of the state before being overtaken by a writ issued for Hole's return by a Seattle judge.

When brought to Marion, Hole pleaded not guilty and his bond was fixed at $1,500. It was furnished by his father and his uncle, the former residing at Versailles and the latter at Greenville. Both are wealthy.

Hole's relatives will restore the money taken by Hole from the express company and pay all the costs in the case to keep him from the reformatory.

She has resided the greater part of the last two years with relatives in Chicago. The groom is a switchman in the service of the Erie Railroad company.

They will reside at No. 433 north Main street.

NEIDIG APPEARS IN THE MAYOR'S COURT

Pleads Not Guilty to the Charges Made Against Him.

CLAIMS ROOM NOT IN HIS KEEPING

Says He Sublets Room in Which a Poker Game Is Found in Progress and in Which Whisky Is Found—A Young Wanderer Is Returned to His Family.

Peter H. Neidig appeared before the mayor, Thursday, to answer to two charges filed against him by Captain Bond. The first warrant charged Neidig with keeping a place where intoxicating liquors are sold and kept for sale. The second charge against Neidig was for keeping a room for gambling purposes. The filing of the affidavits was the result of a raid made on Neidig's place, Tuesday night, when a poker game was broken up. Neidig pleaded not guilty to both charges and his hearing was set for October 29, but in case the attorneys for the defense finish some cases which they have in court, the hearing will be held two days earlier. Neidig claims to have sub-leased the room over his place where the whisky was found and the game was in progress.

Deserted by her husband when about to become a mother, left almost penniless and without a home, is the experience of Mrs. Charles Wilson, who with her husband came to Marion about six weeks ago from Delaware county. A short time ago they resided in Newark.

The Wilson woman called on the mayor, Thursday, to see what steps could be taken to compell the husband to provide and care for her. Broken hearted the woman related the story of their domestic life. She said that this is the fourth time her husband had left her during their married life of two years. They came here and secured a couple of rooms and did light housekeeping, her husband being employed at the shops of the Marion Steam Shovel company. Monday afternoon, he drew his money at the shops, amounting to more than $32, and left on the 4 o'clock car on the C., D. & M. for Columbus. The authorities at that place were notified, but he was not apprehended and it is believed that he left the car at Delaware and took a train out of that place. Besides leaving without paying the rent for his rooms, Wilson left a number of other unpaid bills.

J. W. Ulsh, officer of the Humane society, will probably investigate the case and try and apprehend the woman's husband.

Amel Thornton, who pleaded guilty in the mayor's court to a charge of tampering with and stealing wires belonging to the C., M. & B. company and was bound over to the grand jury, was taken to jail Wednesday afternoon, in default of a bond of $200.

As a result of a recent inspection of the First Church of Christ, on north Main street, made by Carl Wicke, inspector of workshops and factories in this district, Mayor Scherff has received a copy of the order issued to W. B. Camp, president of the board of trustees of the church, with instructions to see that the order is complied with. The chief inspector orders the trustees to change the front and rear doors of the church to open out, to provide substantial hand-railings for the stairway to the balcony and stairways to the auditorium, to discontinue the use of the room under the front stairway as a coal bin and provide a suitable place outside of the building for the storage of coal.

The small boy found in the railroad yards, Wednesday afternoon, by a galvanizer and turned over to Officer Cusic, proved to be the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Guthery, of Delaware avenue. The boy, who is but little over three years of age, is accustomed to running away from home and seems to have a desire to be around the railroads.

The tot rode his tricycle away from home, Wednesday afternoon, and went up Campbell street to the Big Four tracks. Here he deserted his tricycle and walked down the tracks toward the union station. After being around the station unnoticed for a time, he started for the north yards of the Hocking Valley. It was while he was journeying north on the tracks that he was taken in charge by a Hocking Valley employe and turned over to Officer Cusic. The boy refused to tell the officers his right name and after being held at police headquarters for some time it occurred to Officer Cusic that the Guthery boy was in the habit of running away. Mr. Guthery was communicated with and conveyed the young wanderer to his home.

Nearly every man can see all the beauty of married life till he gets into it.

PLANNING FOR AN EXHIBITION OF CORN

Corn Growers and Dealers Hold a Meeting.

The Marion County Corn Improvement association met in the room under the Marion County bank, Tuesday evening.

There was a large attendance. It was decided to hold the annual corn show, December 16-17-18, and hold in connection with it a corn institute, with speakers of national reputation on the program. A committee was appointed to secure a place for holding the show, and, if possible, the skating rink will be secured.

All kinds of corn will be exhibited, also pumpkins, vegetables and various grains.

The next meeting will be held, Tuesday, November 2, at which time the committees on premium list, speakers and place of holding show will report.

Will Pay Premiums.

Secretary James A. Knapp, of the Marion County Agricultural society, says that he is now ready to pay about $3,500 in premiums. "I've just got my books straightened up and will begin paying the premiums at once," he said. Of the $3,500 to be paid out in premiums by the fair directors over $3,000 will be distributed among Marion county exhibitors.

TO URGE THE ABOLITION OF TARIFF ON MEATS

The American Packers May Take Action.

CATTLE RAISERS DO NOT MEET DEMAND

The United States Is Confronting an Alarming Shrinkage in the Meat Product—Americans Are Greatest Meat Eaters in the World—Soon Not Enough To Supply Them.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—That the American packers will probably urge the abolition of the tariff on meats, unless the cattle raisers of the West do something to relieve the present comparative shortage of cattle, was predicted, Tuesday, by General Michael Ryan, of Cincinnati, president of the American Packers' association, now in session here. General Ryan's statement was made during an interview with a United States representative.

"The United States is confronting an alarming shrinkage of her meat product," he declared. "Americans are the greatest meat eaters in the world, but in a short time, if the present shrinkage continues, there will not be enough meat for them.

"Unless the Western cattlemen can be induced to raise more cattle, a sure remedy for this condition would be taking the tariff off all meats. At present meat raised in Argentine is shipped to England and sold at reasonable figures. With the tariff this meat could not come to the United States but with the tariff off, most of it would be diverted to this country.

"If the packers of the United States would join in a petition to congress to take the tariff off meat—and I feel sure they would do it—it should not be difficult to have it removed."

BROTHERHOOD HOLDS VERY NICE MEETING

A Series of Sessions for Fall and Winter Opened.

INTRODUCTION OF NEW TOASTMASTER

Samuel H. DeLong Presides at Meeting—Dr. Dana O. Weeks Delivers an Address on "Brotherhood." Musical Selections Are Rendered. Program Followed by Supper.

The Presbyterian brotherhood opened its fall and winter series of social meetings with a spread and program at the First Presbyterian church, Tuesday night. Incidentally, a new toastmaster of exceptional ability was introduced for the first time in the person of Samuel H. DeLong, who presided with the dignity and aptitude of one long accustomed to such things.

The meeting was first called to order by the brotherhood president, J. A. Curl, in the Sabbath-school room, following several selections by an orchestra composed of L. B. McNeal, flute; Frank Philbrick, violin; H. W. Slayton, piano, and Z. A. Meredith, cornet.

President Curl announced that Dr. Dana O. Weeks would deliver a short address on "Brotherhood." Dr. Weeks used a growing rose-bud as an illustration of the development of brotherhood from childhood to manhood. He described how gradually the bud became a full blown rose of beauty and fragrance. It was so with the lives of the men of the Presbyterian brotherhood, he said; their associations made better men of them and from their lives emanated the fragrance of good deeds and the beauty of Christian kindness.

George H. Uhler sang a solo and was compelled to respond to an encore, so pleasing with his effort. He was accompanied on the piano by his sister, Mrs. Emma Uhler Vorhees, and Frank Philbrick on the violin.

The brotherhood members then repaired to the dining-room in the basement, where, after an excellent supper had been served, Mr. DeLong made his debut as toastmaster. Although it was his first attempt no stranger would have known it, for he never seemed abashed, presiding with a polished ease and sparkling wit that formed one of the really delightful treats of the evening.

Rev. George M. Rourke, the pastor, spoke for half an hour or more, regaling his hearers with interesting personal observations of Alaska. He said he had gone there believing the country to be a synonym for bleakness and all that was barren and cold. To his utmost surprise, he said, he found it the reverse. He told the story of "Soapy" Smith, the terror of Skagway, who robbed and murdered at will; how a brave Mr. Reed had, at the sacrifice of his life, ridded the community of the desperado by a bullet through the heart fired in self-defense, and told of the big monument erected in Skagway to the honor and glory of Mr. Reed.

A decade ago Skagway was the headquarters for "Soapy" Smith and his cut-throat band, but today it is a quiet, peaceful community, prosperous and growing in rapid strides, Rev. Mr. Rourke said. He told of the Indians there and the progress that had been made by them through Christianity, and announced that he would talk from the pulpit next Sunday on the Alaskan Indians and some of their customs of the past.

Colonel George B. Christian was next introduced. He said it was too late to talk much and declared that he had been made a victim of advertising. After his address at the Sunday-school rally and home-coming, Sunday morning, he said he had been called up by telephone from Columbus to make an address before the National Roads' convention, to be held in that city, and was later asked by some members of the brotherhood to talk on "Presbyterianism." He paid a compliment to the Presbyterian character of William Jennings Bryan. He declared that he was not a pessimist in his old age, but an optimist at all times. He predicted the fall of Spain as a monarchy and asserted that anarchy in this country could only be met by the Christian men and women of the land.

W. N. Harder was the last speaker. He declared that the brotherhood ought to have some specific object in view and fell in with a suggestion by Rev. Mr. Rourke that 100 men of the brotherhood give five dollars for foreign missions. He urged more activity on the part of the members during the coming year.

Will Not Move.

Budd Bakes, well known in this city, has accepted a position as assistant cashier of the National bank at Mt. Gilead and will not move to Mt. Vernon, where he had received an appointment as one of the officers in the record-keeping department of the state sanatorium for tuberculosis.

GREAT GATHERING AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Home Coming of Old Workers in the Sunday-School.

PLEASING ADDRESSES GIVEN BY MEMBERS

Rally-Day Exercises at the First Baptist Church Prove a Great Success. Rev D H Bailey Talks to a Large Audience at Epworth M E. Church Church Notes.

Fully 1000 people attended the home-coming and rally-day exercises in the First Presbyterian church Sunday-school, Sunday morning It was the home-coming of those who had attended Sunday-school many years ago—some as far back at half a century—and the rallying together of all those who belong to the same Sunday-school today The event was one of the most joyous ever held by the Presbyterian Sunday-school

The autumn decorations were remarkably attractive The choir loft formed a leafy bower, clusters of oak leaves of varying hues being artistically arranged The great chandeliers were festooned with autumn foliage, and over the big arch between the Sunday-school room and the auditorium, tree branches, with leaves of many shades and colors, were hung

The program was opened with a selection, by the Sunday-school orchestra Rev George M Rourke, the pastor, invoked the divine blessing, and D. C Nelson, the Sunday-school superintendent, delivered a short address of welcome He reviewed the present day work of the Sunday school and expressed his profound pleasure because so many old, familiar faces were to be seen in the audience

John H Bartram a former superintendent of the Sunday school responded and recalled several interesting events of the past "Homeward" was sung by the audience, followed by the assembling and singing of the primary department under the direction of Mrs D L Sellers the superintendent of the primary pupils

"We're the Whole Thing," a recitation, was given by Flyna Lennon Mildred and Mary Belle Crow and Lucile Bowlus, of the elementary department

Mrs James L Lust read from the Sunday-school Journal, followed by Mrs D L Sellers and S E DeWolfe, who gave interesting reminiscences Both have been identified with the Sunday-school work of the Presbyterian church for many years and their talks, although brief, proved delightful features of the program

"Gloria" was rendered by a mixed chorus and at the close Dr Dana O Weeks called the roll of the Sunday-school since 1867, many in the audience responding

The offering was taken at this time and it amounted to more than $60

Rev Mr Rourke gave a few interesting thoughts and suggestions anent the Sunday-school lesson, and this was followed by singing of "The Open Door," by the primary department

Secretary James Fies gave a report of the Sunday-school that showed it to be in the most promising condition of its history and constantly growing

Everybody was asked to register upon entering the church and practically all of them complied

Colonel Christian's Address

A feature of the program was the address of Colonel George B Christian, who briefly told the story of Rip Van Winkle and added that he himself had been absent from Sunday-school fifty years But the only difference between Rip and myself is that I know you and you know me," said Colonel Christian If any of you expect to address a gathering of this kind fifty years hence you'll have to be a good Presbyterian

Colonel Christian described the surroundings in the old days Many of the scholars had gone along with many of the song birds of his boyhood days, he said In speaking of the difference in dress, he declared the simplicity of the garment worn in those days was in striking contrast with the creations of today Then the girls wore calico and ginghams when they were dressed up in their best and every boy wore boots If the boy had come to Sunday-school with shoes on, he would have been thrown out the window, Colonel Christian said The boys wore roundabouts with brass buttons and no overcoats When the lad changed to a long-tailed coat it was a great event at Sunday school Usually some smaller boy helped him along by sitting in the rear and pulling the tail

'Sunday-school in those days was more of a social center,' continued Colonel Christian "There were no daily papers, and the boys didn't talk about Pittsburg and Detroit as to the world's baseball championship One would whisper to the one nearest him that he had seen a flock of wild turkeys in the Copeland woods Another would whisper that he had seen a deer in the Peters woods, and I heard another whisper that he had discovered a shell-bark hickory nut tree and the shells were so thin that you could crush them with your fingers I heard one relate how he had caught eleven snakes in the lowlands near where my present home now is and how he tied strings to their tails and chased the girls with them

"The man who went to New York and saw for the first time a porcelain bath tub and wrote home and wished it was Saturday night, so he could take a bath, was a Presbyterian fifty years ago"

Colonel Christian told of the strict rules of the Presbyterian home then and how no one took a bath on Sunday The bath was taken Saturday night He continued

"The rules that governed the Presbyterian home for twenty-five years clearly indicated that the strict Sabbath observance did not interfere with the well-being and happiness of the community No place was open on Sunday, not even the post-office or a drug store

One of the benefits of this early training was that it frequently held the boy or girl to the right in after life Presbyterianism and the principles it teaches whether we all believe in them or not, stand for good government, observance of law and maintainance of order, and from without the mouths of these babes there may come in future years words of wisdom that will assist in protecting this nation from the ever-present threat of anarchy and extreme socialism now so evident in our national life"

The program was closed by the audience singing, "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds"

Talk to the Voters

At Epworth M E church Sunday evening, the pastor, Rev D H Bailey delivered an interesting address on the subject "Choosing Our City Officials What the Issue" His text is found in Deuteronomy 1 13 which says "Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes and I will make them rulers over you After describing briefly the early government of the Hebrews the pastor spoke of the necessity of obtaining men of integrity for official positions in any government that would meet the ends for which civil government was instituted

The pastor said in part 'The spirit of greed that asserts itself so forcefully, the tendency to hold loose notions regarding the handling of the public funds the disposition on the part of agents for supply houses to take advantage of men ignorant of the merits of goods needed for the public demand men of the highest integrity and broadest experience for the management of the business of a city or state Laziness combined with ignorance, lust, drunkenness and other vices produces a class of citizens dangerous to the welfare of the individual as well as the government as a whole It is a matter of great moment to local governments as well as the state and national governments when it is decided how to protect the law-abiding citizen from the criminal classes Theft, robbery, incendiarism rape and murder are all rapidly increasing in the civilizations of the world and in none more rapidly than in our own America

The home which is the support of all our institutions is threatened by the demons of lust and appetite The prevalence of houses of prostitution public drinking places in defiance of law and gambling joints running night and day under the gaze of the officers of the law as well as the public presents a scene of demoralization the consequences of which should strike alarm to any man who set harbors in his heart any respect for the marriage vow, the sacredness of the home or the welfare of our citizenship

The most defiant and the most destructive of patriotic instinct of any of these institutions is the saloon Saloon keepers never have and never expect to obey any law that they may by intrigue deception fraud or defiance set at naught When allowed to run under certain restrictions they never show any respect for restrictions When pressed in the campaigns for their overthrow they make loud protests that if allowed to remain they will do better, but they never reform If voted out of legal existence many of them still exhibit their spirit of defiance by conducting speak easies and blind tigers

In the local option campaign the arguments of the saloon keepers centered around three propositions First that the voting out of the saloons would be an injury to business This proposition never was based on common sense and is no longer advocated by any one who is not drunk or in a stupor from his last spree Secondly it was urged that the voting out of the saloons would cause an increase in taxes This has been proven to be false by such overwhelming evidence that it is no longer advocated except by the ignorant or by some one who presumes upon the ignorance of his auditors The third proposition still remains that you cannot enforce the law The only argument advocated today against the laws prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in saloons is that saloon keepers cannot be compelled to obey the law

'The liquor interests of Ohio, today, are bent on doing two things First, by the sale or giving away of intoxicating liquors in dry territory to make all the drunks possible, second, to so intimidate police officers and debauch courts that violators of the law in the sale of liquors shall not be punished They were law-breakers before being voted out of business and they do not propose to change their life afterwards

'What kind of men will likely meet the difficult problems that belong to such positions of responsibility? It is not strange that representatives of the law-breaking classes should seek positions of power, and through the indifference of good citizens, the influence of the party lash, and many forms of deception, it is possible at times for them to succeed In this way men who are corrupt in life foul of mouth, and whose associates are gamblers, harlots and of the worst classes of a city, may be elected to office

'This is serious business Let no one be deceived The nomination of a man for office does not change the character of the man Any one who tries to deceive the public knowingly and secures the election of a corrupt man, in religion is an imitator in patriotism he followed the example of Benedict Arnold and if the coat were taken from his back he could be no better than the plug ugly whose election he desires The text points to the true course in selecting officials of government

"What are the issues in Marion? First of all, it is not the baseball question It was demonstrated to the satisfaction of both sides in the controversy three years ago that only county officials can deal with this question and from present indications there is not likely to be much interference from that source in the near future" Here the pastor referred to a statement made by him last summer that nothing could be expected from the juries of Marion county in convictions for illegal liquor selling The jury commission replied with threats in an open letter published in the papers of the county

'Only last week the prosecuting attorney stated that you could not secure a conviction for murder by a Marion county jury The jury commission will no doubt hang him in effigy, but if illegal liquor selling and murder are to be ignored by our juries, Sunday baseball is likely to go free

'The question is not, 'Shall we return to the legalized saloon?' The people may not vote on that question for two years The only question is, shall a dozen or so outlawed saloon-keepers, with gamblers and other vicious classes, control the government of the city and throw the city open to all forms of vice and crime? If the fair name of Marion is to be maintained, the peace and prosperity of the city secured, it is time for every reputable citizen to throw away his personal prejudices and begin an active campaign for the protection of our homes, our property and our personal security

Special Services

FINE PERCHERONS SHOWN IN PARADE

Imported Horses of T. R. Watkins Seen on the Street.

T P Watkins gave a small but attractive parade of horses, on the streets, at noon, Tuesday, when the stablemen gave a bunch of recently imported Percherons a bit of exercise The parade consisted mainly of two-year-old mares, all of iron gray color, and a finer lot of two-year-olds has never been seen in Marion There was one stallion in the parade

Mr Watkins recently returned from France with an importation of twenty head of Percherons, and knowing horsemen declare it a very fine collection well calculated to improve the culture of draft horses in this section Heretofore local importers have brought over only stallions but it is very evident that pure blood brood mares are needed to get the highest development in breeding Percherons in this country

Mr Watkins is aiming to supply this need and with this importation is catering to the high class horse trade by offering these perfect Percheron mares These animals cost more than the common breeding mares, but horsemen are learning that the investment is well worth all it costs paying big return in the improved character of the stock Many are Mr Watkins has brought some fine Percheron mother blood to Marion county, a thing to interest farmers and horse lovers generally

RETURN OF HALLEY'S COMET IS ANNOUNCED

Professor Max Wolf Locates the Wanderer.

THE COMET APPEARS AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Halley's Comet Is the First Celestial Body of Its Kind Which Is Mathematically Subjugated to the Law of Gravitation—History of Comet Found Interesting.

The announcement by Professor Max Wolf that he has discovered Halley's comet will be received with interest and with surprise by every astronomer throughout the world—with interest, because not a little credit redounds to the Heidelberg astronomer, when it is considered how much this honor has been coveted; and with surprise, because the historic comet has made its appearance nearly four months before it was expected.

Halley's comet is unique because it was the first celestial body of its kind which was mathematically subjugated to the law of gravitation, and because its history is to a large extent the history of astronomy. In 1682 a comet was observed by Newton, Halley, and others. On examining the circumstances of its motion, Edmund Halley, who was Newton's intimate friend and who did perhaps more than any other astronomer of his day to popularize the idea of gravitation, computed its orbit on the supposition that it was parabolic. Comparing his results with the observations of previous comets, for which purpose it was necessary to calculate their orbits from the necessarily imperfect measurements of earlier times, he found that in 1531 and 1607 comets had appeared which followed so nearly the same path that he ventured to assert its identity with them, and to predict its return within a period of about seventy-five years. Knowing that he would not live to witness the event, because of his advanced age, he left a plea for recognition which reads: "Wherefore, if it should return according to our predictions about the year 1758, impartial posterity will not refuse to acknowledge that this was first discovered by an Englishman."

In the year 1758 the French astronomer Clairaut took up the task of computing the perturbations which the comet would probably have experienced since its last appearance, because of the influence of the two great planets, Jupiter and Saturn. An extremely laborious calculation showed that the comet would have been retarded about 100 days by Saturn and about 518 days by Jupiter; and accordingly he announced to the Academy of Sciences near the end of the year 1758, that the comet might be expected to pass its perihelion about April 13 of the following year, and that owing to various defects in this calculation, there might be an error of a month either way. The comet was actually discovered by an amateur, George Palitzsch, on Christmas day 1758, thereby justifying Halley's brilliant conjecture, adding a new member to the solar system, and raising the hope (to be later amply fulfilled) that in other cases also the motions of comets might be reduced to rule. Thus at one fell stroke the dreadful divinity that once hedged a comet, the badge of pestilence, of war, and of death, was swept aside for all time.

Since Clairaut's day Halley's comet has been made the subject of much mathematical inquiry. The French astronomer Pontecoulant carried the calculation of the perturbations back to 1531 and recently Messrs. Cowell and Crommelin of Greenwich have traced the comet back beyond the Christian era. The result of these computations has been to prove that Halley's comet undoubtedly appeared in 1066, and was promptly regarded by William the Conqueror as an omen of victory for his English invasion, and that it is the same which is depicted on the Bayeux tapestry. In 1378 and 1456 it appeared again. Constantinople was besieged by the Turks in 1456, and the comet was regarded by the Mohammedans as a favorable sign because of the crescent-shaped tail. Christendom was so alarmed at the simultaneous apparition of the Turk and the comet that a papal bull was promulgated against both. In a measure, therefore, the history of Halley's comet is the history of civilization.

The problem of predicting the return of such a body as Halley's comet is one of considerable difficulty. If the sun and comet alone existed in space, the path of the comet could be determined easily. There are also planets to be considered, and these have a marked perturbing effect.

So variable are the features of the comet, that in all the recorded instances of its return the descriptions never quite tally. In 1066 it created universal dread throughout Europe. In 1145, according to the Chinese, it had a tail ten degrees long. In 1222 it is spoken of as a fine star of the first magnitude with a large tail. In 1456 it occupied a space nearly seventy degrees in length, and spread terror throughout Europe during the month in which it was visible. On the other hand, in 1531 and 1607 it does not appear to have been so conspicuous, for its tail was only seven degrees long. In 1682 the comet attracted little attention except among astronomers, the tail being twelve to sixteen degrees long. This apparent waning of the comet led to the fear that in 1758, the year of its first predicted return, it might be so faint as not to be visible at all. In truth, the tail was not visible until after perihelion, and was then inconspicuous because at its brightest it was seen against bright twilight. In 1835 the comet was visible to the naked eye during the whole of October, and its tail varied from twenty to thirty degrees in length. So marked have been the fluctuations, that there is some question whether the comet will be as magnificent in 1910 as it was in 1456 or whether it will be as insignificant as it was in 1607.

Halley's comet never reappears with clock like regularity. The change in period from one revolution to the next in some cases has amounted to more than two years. The longest revolution so far recorded was that from 1222 to 1301—seventy-nine years and two months. The shortest round is the one now being accomplished in a little less than seventy-five years and five and five-tenths months. This extreme range of over four years in the orbital period renders necessary the most careful and laborious calculation of the effect of the attraction of all the planets upon the comet. It is indeed marvelous that mathematicians have come so near to predicting the exact date of perihelion at previous appearances. The best calculation hitherto made was that of Pontecoulant, who was only two days out of the way, an achievement which is not likely to be out-done by mathematicians of our time. In 1864 Pontecoulant published the results of his calculation of the present return, and placed it early in May, 1910, a result with which the observations of Cowell and Crommelin agree. Their reservation that possibly the comet may be at perihelion a few weeks sooner is amply justified by Wolf's early discovery. At present the comet is about 250,000,000 miles away from the earth. At the beginning of November its distance should be not more than 165,000,000 miles.

It is certain that if May 10, 1910, is the date of perihelion the comet will be disappointingly near the sun, so that the solar glare will rob it of its principal glories.—Scientific American.

BARRIE TO WED PAULINE CHASE WHEN DIVORCED

On the heels of the announcement that J. M. Barrie, the author and playwright, had sued his wife for divorce in London came the report that Mr. Barrie intended to marry pretty Pauline Chase, an American actress, when he obtained his decree. Miss Chase was born in Washington and was educated in a convent, but she went on the stage at fifteen and made a hit from the very start. In New York she won fame as "the pink pajama girl" in a musical piece, and London took her up when she went there. She met Mr. Barrie through playing the title part in "Peter Pan" in London.
